Sells the Goods.

What are you doing that will get you a share of the big profits now being made from ATLANTA'S rapid growth and increasing real estate values?

Are you satisfied to sit idly by and watch others who earn less and have less than you become wealthy when the same opportunity is knocking on your door and theirs?

The City of Atlanta is a marvel of the century in growth in every way except area. The increase in population, in finances, in buildings, in everything that goes to make a great city, except in the ground it covers, is enormous.

For instance---the population in 1900 was 89,872 whereas in 1913 it was 220,373---an increase of nearly three for one.

During the same period the area only increased about 40 per cent.

This goes to show that Atlanta is about due to spread over a greater surface. This is the real keynote to present opportunities.

The city of Atlanta has passed the experimental stage of city building. It is now so large in everything that goes to make a great city that it cannot go backward. It must go forward if we are to judge its future by the history of other cities not nearly so well situated.

This forward movement means a sure advance in real estate values. It would be just as possible to stop this increase in values as it would to stop the growth of the city. The one parallels the other in city building---always has---always will. It is inevitable.

The City of Atlanta is made up of progressive people, people who built a metropolis on the ashes of a devastated village.

This is the Atlanta Spirit that does things and surmounts difficulties. It is the same spirit that promises to make Atlanta a city of 500,000 in 1920. It is the same spirit that has made thousands of residents wealthy and will continue to make other residents more wealthy if they will but heed the warning---reach out and take the profits that are offered them. Many, of course, will not profit by the experiences of others. Others will.

Here is YOUR OPPORTUNITY

ATLANTA must spread over more ground and in doing so will take in many present outlying adjacent properties. No matter how much one realizes the possibilities of advancing real estate values, unless one has large capital and long experience in the work of buying acreage property, turning it into lots and selling it at big profits, he cannot hope to share in the profits of this work. Those who will profit most from this "spreading" of the city are those who now become interested in the work of advance and development.

The Southland Estates corporation, capitalized at $100,000.00 is a co-operative organization designed to buy, improve and sell property in and adjacent to Atlanta.

It offers an opportunity to investors who realize the great profits to be made from real estate development and yet have not sufficient capital and experience to get into this work individually.

By thus accumulating funds of investors who can place from $100.00 to $1,000.00 we have enough capital to dominate the situation and, joining the capital to our experience in the work, earn large profits for those who could not in any other way get on the "inside" of this work.

We are dividing among those who become interested in this work $87,870 in lots situated in beautiful Westland Estates

Comparative Distances

This diagram illustrates comparative distances and consequent values of property in Atlanta today. Study these carefully and draw your own conclusions. Westland Estates are sure to advance in value.

ATLANTA'S RICH MEN

Almost to a man Atlanta's wealthy class are those who looked ahead, a few years ago became financially interested in development projects even to the extent of a few hundred dollars. Few of these had enough money of their own to get into this work on an individual basis and joined themselves into companies such as this with the result that they are today independent. It takes money to make money. The greater the capital available with which to operate, the more the dividends in the work of real estate development. This company is operated on a co-operative basis. Every part owner has the same advantages and earns the same relative profits. Our first development project, WESTLAND ESTATES, has within a few months earned sales profits of $23,000.00, or 23 per cent on our entire capital. And this is only the beginning of our operations. Those who become interested now will share equally not only in WESTLAND ESTATES profits, which should be more than $200,000.00, but in all future projects of this company.

operated in practically the same methods as SOUTHLAND ESTATES CORPORATION have paid immense dividends all over the country.

For instance, in 17 years the Los Angeles Investment company has paid its stockholders 655 per cent, or an average of 38 per cent per year. One hundred dollars invested in this company 17 years ago is now worth $20,575.72. Likewise, $10.00 a month invested in this company for 17 years is now worth $49,468.01, or 10 cents a day invested for 17 years is now worth $14,840.40. The Home Builders' Agency has paid $925.00 dividends in six years on each $1,000 invested and placed more than $5.00 to a surplus of undivided profits for every dollar paid in dividends. We have greater opportunities than these companies had and no competition in this particular work.

Oglethorpe Park Now Taking Shape in North Fulton

Great New Residence Section Lies Near Silver Lake and Grounds of Oglethorpe University

With the momentum characteristic of Gavin P. Ansley when he tackles a development proposition, Oglethorpe Park has been taking shape out of the woods of north Fulton's highlands.

On the slopes overlooking Brookhaven lake and golf course at the south, gangs of men are at work these days, cutting their way through the big oaks and pine trees, laying open the boulevards for part of Atlanta's great new growth.

At the east lies Silver Lake. There are the grounds of Oglethorpe university, planned definitely now as the southern Princeton.

Between these two inspiring developments in the corner formed by them,
a Oglethorpe Park, more than 600 acres of wooded upland, forest since the ages,
now being transformed into a dwelling place for man.

"Why didn't somebody see this before?" exclaimed one real estate authority who looked over the property last week. He fairly wrung his hands.

"It's even got me enthused," declared
S. E. Davidson, who is in immediate charge of the development for Mr. Ansley.
"It gets everybody just the same way. The jewel has been here in the rough all the time. Oglethorpe university and Brookhaven club have come along and uncovered it. Now it's being plished."

ON MARKET SOON.
Within a few days, perhaps a week, between ten days, the property will be placed on the market. But that's an after matter. That's the matter and phase of it. The matter now before the house is that Oglethorpe Park is becoming a fact so fast that you can go out and look at it, and ride around over most of it in an automobile by Wednesday or thereabouts.

"We've been working there for the last ten days," said Mr. Davidson yesterday. "We've been setting off dynamite all the time, and it's sounded like the climax of the world. We've been cutting swathes through the woods that a cyclone could not have done. We've been hauling down and blowing loose all the things that we've been making it look like what it's going to be. The woods are full of lumber. They are everywhere, and the work they have done already is tremendous."

This is the impetus which got behind Ansley Park some eight years ago. Just after the former owners of that tract had paid $500,000 for it, the county treasurer, that is the impetus which with additional force gathered from every buyer in the development, has driven Ansley Park's assessed value up 10,000 per cent in the eight years since Mr. Ansley acquired control of it. Last year Ansley Park property owners paid $51,000 in tax money into the city and county treasuries, on property assessed at $125,000. That is the story of Ansley Park up to this day.

Oglethorpe Park's beginning is just now with us.

GROWTH TOWARD NORTH.
The future rests with big elemental forces which Mr. Ansley is encouraging, said Mr. Davidson. "They are forces which no one man can make or unmake. The irresistible growth of Atlanta is toward the north. The natural pole of that growth for the next generation or so will be between Oglethorpe university and the Brookhaven lake. There is where Oglethorpe Park is away up in the fresh air, on high ground that you know is high while you stand on it and look around, with its slope toward the south. That's Oglethorpe Park."

Six thousand feet of the big tract fronts on North Peachtree road, already open to Dunwoody from main Peachtree road. Last week the Fulton county convicts started grading that road, making it ready for the pavement to come later. The proposed extension of the Watson road into the Brookhaven area crosses Oglethorpe Park. The property straddles the Fulton-Buckhead north and south line, about two-thirds of it being in Fulton county, in land lot 12 and adjoining land lots. All of the park with the exception of 80 acres in one piece is in the original big woods
it comprises the S. C. Stovall property, which has a large frontage on Peachtree road; the Hart estate, the Carter property, and the Mabry, Ashburn, and Ashford properties. From all of these have come the area of Oglethorpe Park and the interests advancing its fortunes.

The main entrance to Oglethorpe park is through the Stovall property and opens 200 feet on Peachtree road.
This drive narrows to 75 feet, the width of Peachtree, just inside the entrance, and continues at that width in a big arc around to the north and northeast, through 15,000 feet to Oglethorpe university, with its upper outlet here into Peachtree road. This describes what would be merely the most direct trunk of a perfect system of driveways, on all of which is the inner frontage of Oglethorpe park; and it does not even refer to that more than a mile of other frontage on North Peachtree road.

NEAR CAR LINE.
The present terminus of the Peachtree road car line is just a few feet beyond the entrance to Oglethorpe park. Some day, perhaps, that end will be turned back and pointed up into the main Oglethorpe drive for the direct route to the club house and the university and the two lakes. When that is done—well, when that is done everybody will say it ought to have been done long ago. That's the history of such things as this—first the development, then the community of interests and offering an irresistible demand, and finally the concession of all improvements. The rock foundation for this community of interests is there already —Brookhaven, the Capital City club, where the men who do Atlanta's big things are associated; the university

soon to be started; and Silver Lake.
If Atlanta were not going to grow any more, then Oglethorpe park would be fit habitat for a wild man imagining it.

But Atlanta is going to grow more.
That is why Oglethorpe park is appearing out of the woods in upper Fulton.

Mr. Davidson said yesterday that the property will be distributed in tracts of from 2.5 to 10 acres; that it will be reserved for buyers of the highest class, but that it will be available on reasonable terms and at reasonable figures.

COTTON FUTURES BILL OF VAST REEF TO FARMERS OF SOUTH

Farmers of Georgia Should Save Gigantic Sum of $12,- 500,000 Annually by Passage of Measure

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The Smith-Smith cotton futures bill, so designated because Senator
Smith of Georgia, and Senator Ellison Smith of South Carolina joined in pressing the measure to its final passage through the senate, is regarded as one of the most important pieces of legislation ever enacted for the benefit of the southern people.

Persons familiar with the subject believe that a reasonable estimate of the direct benefit of the legislation to the south will approximate five dollars a bale in dollars and cents.

As Georgia raises about two and a half million bales of cotton each year,
the bill when it finally becomes a law should be put into the pockets of the farmers of Georgia $12,500,000 annually, or stating the proposition technically, save to the Georgia farmers this enormous sum annually through preventing manipulations on the New York Cotton Exchange.

WILL PASS HOUSE.
Before it becomes a law, the bill must pass the house of representatives. It is reassuring, however, in this connection to understand that several times within recent years the house has passed bills to compel the New York cotton exchange to remodel its system of conducting business.

The bill as passed the senate forbids
the use of the mails to exchange dealing in cotton unless they reform their contracts so as to meet certain provided requirements. It also provides that no price lists of any cotton exchange which does not use the contract required by the bill shall be sent through the mail or over telegraph wires.

The effect of the bill will be to drive entirely out of business any business conducted by a cotton exchange which does not conform to the requirements of the bill.

An important feature of the contract required to be used in future by cotton exchanges which use the mails and the telegraph lines required that they must deal only in cotton covered by the government standardization.

The New York cotton exchange now deals in twenty-three different standards of cotton and selling middling cotton is able to depress the price by forcing the buyer of middling to take dotted cotton and pay only an arbitrary difference between the dotted and middling cotton. In this way the exchange forced down the selling price of middling cotton; for it continually has been selling middling cotton and delivering dotted cotton.

The bill also requires that the contract used by a cotton exchange must provide that the seller on the exchange

if he does not deliver middling cotton, must not only deliver cotton within the government standardization, but pay the commercial or market difference between the value of the middling cotton and the cotton delivered to the purchaser.

It also requires the contract to provide that if no spot market exists in the place where the exchange is conducted then settlement must be made by the average market prices in five places to be named by the secretary of agriculture which are genuine spot markets for cotton.

The bill also requires the contract of the exchange to properly identify the cotton delivered and to be using a subterfuge cotton by which the exchange avoids the prompt delivery and the indication of the actual grade which the purchaser was to receive.

NEW STOCK COMPANY TO START HERE EAST

Lucile La Verne to Open at Either Grand or the Lyric

Commencing Easter Monday, a new stock company will begin an engagement here that is expected to last through the summer. This is the Lucile LaVerne company, and it has been engaged by Jake Wells.

It has not yet been decided whether the performances will be given at the Lyric or Grand theaters. Rehearsals will begin when the players arrive on April 2. By that time Mr. Wells will have determined which theater will be used.

This new company is said to be an excellent one. Miss LaVerne is well known as a Broadway actress, and has a chorus with her composed of unusually pretty girls. The male chorus is made up of college men.

Miss Margaret Chaffee, an Atlanta high school girl, is a member of the company.

OGLETHORPE PARK

A BIG BOULEVARD extending through the S. C. Stovall property, past the Capital City Country Club and through the Hart estate, lying just north of the Brookhaven estates and the Country Club; thence into DeKalb County and through one land lot to Oglethorpe University grounds and Silver Lake properties; thence on a direct route to Chamblée and extending on north by way of Peachtree road. These properties will make only a few tracts, as it is to be cut into lots of two to five acres each. Each tract will be developed upon its own merits, and a carefully selected building site will be provided in each instance. The route selected follows a ridge higher than any part of Peachtree road, overlooking the entire country. With the beautiful club property and lake in the foreground, it has the effect of a mountain plateau, with a great formal garden extending in all directions. Some of the finest landscape engineers of this and other sections have inspected this property and express wonder that this plan has not been discovered sooner. Below are the endorsements of some of the officials of the Capital City Country Club, and also a plat showing the proposed Boulevard.

ATLANTA, GA., March 28, 1914.

MR. R. F. MADDOX, President Capital City Club, City.

Dear Sir:—Believing that the present Country Club house and grounds are rather contracted and inadequate for a club of the dignity and standing of the Capital City, I have been trying to find a way to make the approaches to the club more convenient, and to furnish a beautiful and adequate site for the club's permanent club house, and to that end I have secured the agreements (shown by copies herewith enclosed) from Mr. S. C. Stovall and Mr. A. V. Gude, Jr., which explain themselves.

The present club house can always be used for refreshment and bath house purposes, but the club should have a handsome country club house, with large restaurant and ball room, plenty of porches and sleeping rooms above, for such of its members as would like to make their weekend or permanent home there.

The members of the Capital City Club are Atlanta's wealthiest and most influential citizens, and its membership contributes ninety-five per cent of the money for all public enterprises for Atlanta's good that are brought to a successful conclusion.

If the club had a beautiful site on which to erect its permanent club, I believe its members would quickly subscribe to a bond issue to pay for such a club, and to induce the street car company to extend its car line to said site.

Mr. Stovall has agreed to donate the lot or tract marked "B" adjoining the club property, and I am willing to donate the tract marked "C" for a club site, and I am also willing to co-operate with Mr. Stovall in grading the driveway marked "Club Drive" across the club's property and that agreed to be deeded to it, provided the club will secure an extension of the Peachtree and Brookhaven car line from its present terminus to the north line of the property agreed to be donated to the club by me.

For the consideration named, and in order for the Club to secure additional land for its new Golf Course, at a point where the new links are very much congested, I am willing to deed to the Club the tract of land marked "D" on the enclosed plat provided the Club agrees to maintain said tract for Club purposes, such as Golf Links, Park, etc. The Driveway marked "Club Drive" could connect the present and proposed new Club Building, both with an electric and an automobile drive. The driveways shown on the enclosed plat will furnish the most attractive driving system in the South.

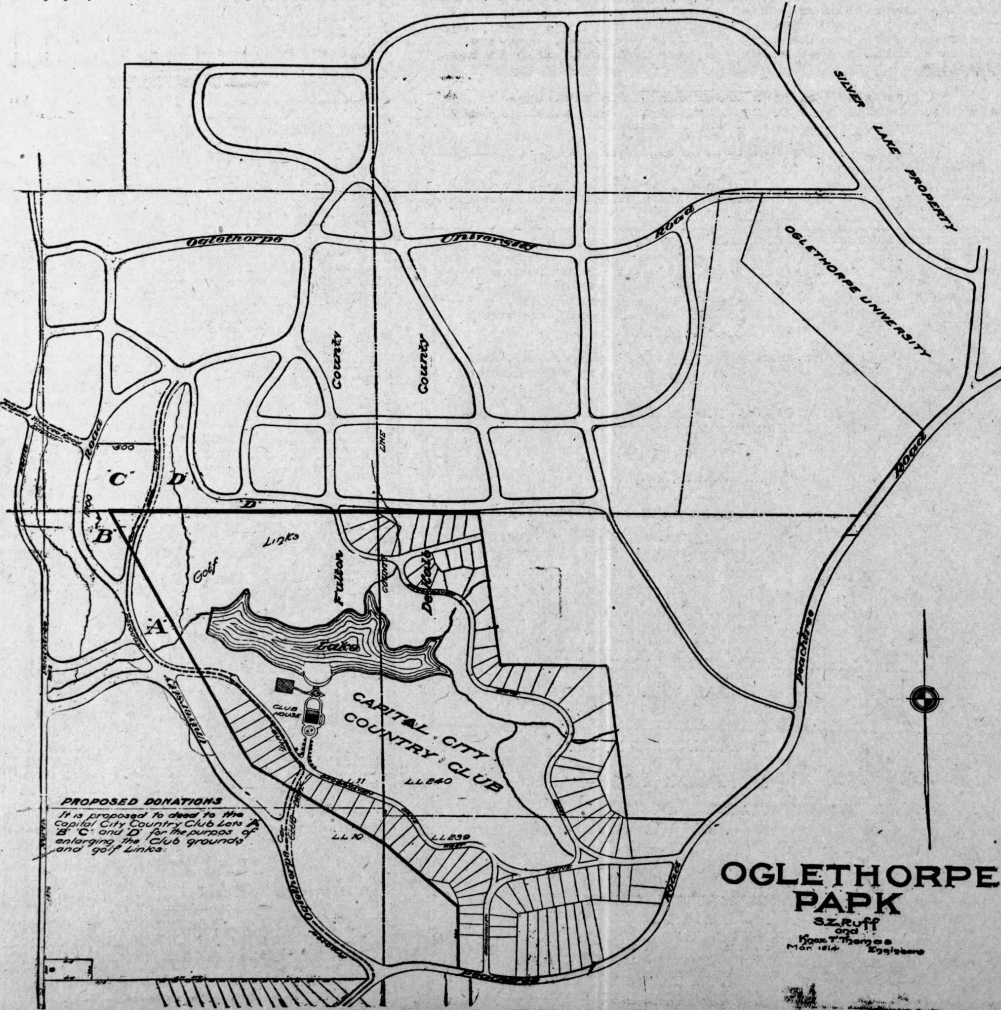

As I am having permanent plats made of Oglethorpe Park, showing its Driveway system and subdivision into tracts for country estates, and the connections of its drives with existing or proposed driveways, and adjoining properties, I ask that you have a call meeting of your Directors immediately and see if they favor, and will recommend an acceptance of the proposed system of driveways through the Club's property, and of the tracts agreed to be donated for Club purposes on the terms and conditions herein outlined.

I think it is well, in all growing communities to "look to the future." Eight years ago Ansley Park was a tangled mass of laps, limbs and underbrush; today it is one of the handsomest residence parks in America, with nearly three hundred homes, and last year, was assessed by the city at $2,500,000.00, and paid to the city and county $50,000.00 in taxes. It increased 11,000 per cent in eight years.

The Forsyth street section increased in property and taxable values 1,000 per cent in five years. The street car line can be extended along Oglethorpe University road to a point where "Club Drive" can connect with it and other proposed roads about 1,000 feet from the present club house. A road is planned from this point to the Weauna road and to the Peachtree and Dunwoody road, which last named road is now being regraded and widened by the county.

As Oglethorpe Park will soon have nine or ten driveways into it, a few weeks' work will convert from sage fields, laps and limbs, into a beautiful suburban residence section.

When the Piedmont Driving club burned, a few years ago, I offered my present home site (then in the rough) and forty acres adjoining, for a Golf Course, in exchange for its present five acre site. Some of its members hooted at the proposition. Since that time, dozens of these same members have come to me and expressed their regrets. Therefore, I say let's look to the future growth of Atlanta and its suburbs, before the Club rejects an offer to acquire additional property that it will never have again, except at a large cost. Respectfully submitted, EDWIN P. ANSLEY.

ATLANTA, GA., March 26th, 1914.

Mr. Edwin P. Ansley, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:—I am willing to grade the 50-foot driveway shown on the plat of Oglethorpe Park marked "Club Drive," from Peachtree Road to the entrance to the present Capital City Country Club, provided the Brookhaven estates will donate to me the five-foot strip, or reservation lying between my property and lots marked 21, 22, 23 and 24 of their plat, and also provided that Mr. A. V. Gude, Jr., will donate a strip of fifty feet wide across the lots controlled by him for street purposes, so as to give the best possible entrance to the club for driveway and street car purposes. And in consideration of Mr. Gude's donating said strip, I agree to donate to him sufficient of my land adjoining his to compensate him for the loan of said strip, and any damage that he may sustain by reason of the driveway going diagonally across his lots.

I am further willing to co-operate with you in grading the driveway marked "Club Drive" its entire length and deeding to the Club the lots or tracts marked on the Oglethorpe Park plat as lots "A" and "B," provided the Club will secure the extension of the Peachtree and Brookhaven car line to the Northern limit of the property that you offer to deed to them for club purposes.

Very truly,
S. C. STOVALL.

ATLANTA, GA., March 28th, 1914.

Mr. Edwin P. Ansley, Atlanta, Georgia.

Dear Sir:—In consideration of the agreement of Mr. S. C. Stovall to compensate me out of land immediately adjoining the lots controlled by me in the Brookhaven Subdivision, I hereby agree that the Driveway provided in Mr. Stovall's agreement may be constructed across the said lots controlled by me.

Very truly yours,
A. V. GUDE, JR.

ATLANTA, GA., March 26th, 1914.

Mr. Edwin P. Ansley, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:—The plans you have shown me of the development you propose between the Capital City Club and Oglethorpe University are beautiful. The land you are placing on the market lying as it does, between these properties, and connected with you propose, by broad drives is some of the most desirable around Atlanta.

Now that you propose to divide it into ample parcels for handsome country homes, it is sure to attract the attention of a high class of buyers, who, in great numbers, wish lots in that section.

Very truly,
W. T. ASHFORD.

ATLANTA, GA., March 28, 1914.

MR. EDWIN P. ANSLEY,

Forsyth Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:—I have looked with interest over your plans for development of the property lying between the Capital City Country Club, the Oglethorpe University site and Silver Lake Estates.

I have long cherished the hope of seeing these magnificent properties connected up by beautiful drives, thus perfecting a desirable loop in connection with the Peachtree road. I heartily endorse your plans as outlined to me, and being familiar with the intervening property, I know of no section better adapted to the purposes you have in contemplation, viz: the making of an ideal country estate subdivision.

Yours very truly,
C. H. ASHFORD.

ATLANTA, GA., March 28, 1914.

MR. E. P. ANSLEY, City.

Dear Sir:—I have investigated your proposition of developing the large tract of property lying between the present terminus of the Peachtree road car line, adjacent to the Capital City Country Club, and extending to the Oglethorpe University site, and I congratulate you most heartily on the broad vision that enables you to afford this splendid opportunity to investors who are seeking locations for country estates ideally located.

I understand your plans contemplate building of roadways and drives of sufficient width to accommodate an extension of the car line, and in this connection, I cannot refrain from stating that I know it to be a fact that the people of Chamblée are particularly anxious to have the car line extended, and I feel safe in stating that they will contribute liberally to this improvement.

The extension of the car line through the property which you are developing, to Chamblée, would, in my opinion, very soon result in splendid homes being erected all along the extension, and I pledge you my heartiest co-operation in the matter.

Yours truly,
W. M. HUTCHINSON, Sec. and Treas.

Atlanta, Ga., March 28, 1914.

Mr. Edwin P. Ansley,

Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:—

The entire membership of the company owning the Silver Lake Park Property, of which I have been president for number of years, have believed in the property as one of the most beautiful in the state. We furthermore know that the property from the Capital City Country Club, lying north and reaching to our property is in a direct line of development.

Oglethorpe University, with its magnificent future, and the other splendid improvements sure to materialize in this immediate section, will contribute to the upbuilding of one of the finest residential suburbs imaginable. The projected development of the plateau, with its beautiful forests, and the system of drives you are now building, will enhance even more the value of this entire section.

Every surprise you have supported has brought abundant success, and the tireless improvements you are contemplating on this property mean that values in this section will increase very rapidly.

Very truly yours,
WM. OWENS.

Atlanta, Ga., March 27, 1914.

Mr. Edwin P. Ansley,

City.

Dear Sir:—On last Tuesday I happened to be near the property that you are now developing, on and near Peachtree road. You showed me over the country estate. I was amazed at the aggressive and progressive way you are going at the work; it is the biggest thing of the kind that I have seen in and around Atlanta; it will fill a want that has been needed a long time—homes to be located on acreage instead of lots 50x150.

The people of this city will and should be proud of your latest subdivision, one which I believe will be the best for many years to come.

I unhesitatingly say the property offers the surest and quickest profit to the speculator that I have ever seen. It only needs to be seen to be appreciated.

Yours very truly,
W. A. VERNON.

ATLANTA, GA., March 14, 1914.

MR. EDWIN P. ANSLEY, Atlanta, Ga.,

Dear Sir:—I have seen the preliminary plans for connecting from Peachtree road the Capital City Country Club properties and the Oglethorpe University and Silver Lake properties by the development of Land Lots 10, 11 and 12. This will mold these valuable properties closely together, and when carried out, will be of much benefit to all the properties involved, and one of the most important improvements made in the northern end of Fulton and western part of DeKalb county for many years.

I should think the merits of this proposition would fully warrant the County Commissioners of Fulton and DeKalb in co-operating liberally with you and your associates in opening up this property, which is sure to mean a large increase in the taxable returns from this section, and its rapid development.

As you know, I have no personal interest, whatever in any of this property, except my interest, as president, in the future welfare of the Capital City Club. Knowing your ability and success in developing property in this and other sections of the country, I have confidence in your judgment, and believe that if your present plans are carried out, your expectations in the success of this enterprise will be fully realized, and a second Ansley Park is destined to be developed in this beautiful section of Fulton and rapidly growing part of DeKalb county.

Yours truly,
ROBT. F. MADDOX.

Atlanta, Ga., March 12, 1914.

Mr. Edwin P. Ansley, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:—The plan you have outlined for connecting property adjoining the Capital City Country Club with that adjoining the site set aside for Oglethorpe University with a splendid driveway, in which make provision for a private right-of-way for the car line, is one of the broadest developments undertaken around Atlanta.

I did not know until I saw your plat that only one Land Lot separates the properties of Brookhaven Estates from that of the Silver Lake Estates, nor that a drive could be built on the north side of the Capital City Club property to connect with the University site, that would be only a few hundred feet longer than by Peachtree Road.

The fact that you are willing to change your plans, so that your proposed driveways around the Club property form an attractive Boulevard system around the Golf Links, and are willing to locate your drive on the north of the Links, fifty or more feet from the Club property, and allow the Club the use of this space that is very necessary to make this plan as wide as the Links as your neighbors is another evidence of your generosity in dealing with your neighbors. It occurs to me that your neighbors, and the public, have profited more than you have, in all of your developments.

I believe the Club and the University will certainly co-operate with you to the fullest extent in carrying out your development plans, and I hope that all adjoining property owners will do the same. Wishing you success in all your plans, I am,
Very truly,
T. JULIAN MCGILL,
Chairman Golf Committee, Capital City Country Club.

Fort Myers, Florida, citizens who had heard something of the Atlanta developments brought about by Mr. Edwin P. Ansley, approached him when he was on a recent winter visit there, with a view to interesting him in a plan to create in and about that city a high-class winter and year-round residence community adjacent to Florida's finest fishing and hunting grounds, and with club house, golf links and all essential appurtenances. Mr. Ansley thought well of the proposal and took it under consideration. The letters presented herewith were written by friends of Mr. Ansley in response to letters of inquiry addressed to them by Mr. H. E. Heitman, merchant and banker, J. E. Foxworthy, cashier of the bank of Fort Myers and the Lane-Shriver-White Co., real estate agents and developers, all of Fort Myers. Relative to these letters and their origin, Mr. Ansley, in writing a friend, said:

"I wanted the people of Fort Myers to know something of my work in Atlanta and decided that the best thing I could do was to refer them to my friends. Their replies and endorsements have been far beyond my expectations, and I am afraid, far beyond my deserts. But their endorsements have been an inspiration to me, and have made me resolve that I will try to live upon the high plane on which they have placed me; and I shall try to deserve the confidence they have placed in me."

With the foregoing statement, the letters, which follow, best speak for themselves.

JOHN SELWY & CO.,

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 15, 1912.
Mr. C. W. Shriver, Fort Myers, Fla.
Dear Sir:—Regarding your inquiry concerning Mr. Edwin P. Ansley, of this city, I will say that I have known him for quite a number of years, and while I have not been associated with him in business, I regard him as one of Atlanta's best citizens.
I don't believe that the word failure is contained in Mr. Ansley's dictionary. He is altogether a self-made man, of keen perception, and a man with accurate judgment. If a man is entitled to be known by his works, then all must concede that E. P. Ansley has been a wonderful success in not only on his own behalf, but in the benefits that have accrued to the city of Atlanta, mainly through his extraordinary efforts. One in Atlanta has only to look about him and observe the works of Mr. Ansley.
Just a few years ago the present Ansley Park, containing many acres was nothing but a forest of woods, and it seemed destined that it would so remain for years to come, but under the magic touch of E. P. Ansley these acres of forest trees have now given away to a splendid and beautiful section of homes, which not only settled Mr. Ansley with a nice sum, but those to whom he sold have likewise been immensely benefited.
He has recently erected the magnificent Hotel Ansley, which has already proved quite a success. Prior to the erection of this hotel, he had developed and built Forsyth Building, which at the time he took hold of it very few people in Atlanta were familiar with. There are many other famous buildings in Atlanta, and it is not too much to say that Mr. Ansley is one of the best portions of the city of Atlanta. There are many other famous buildings in Atlanta, and it is not too much to say that Mr. Ansley is one of the best portions of the city of Atlanta.
I recall in every instance where E. P. Ansley has made improvements the surrounding properties enhanced in value.
As I am not related to and have never been associated with Mr. Ansley in any business transactions, I feel that I can afford to say what I have about him in an altogether disinterested way. I speak as a citizen of Atlanta who desires to give credit when credit is due.
Very truly yours,
A. SPEER.

DAILY, SUNDAY, SEMI-WEEKLY.

JAMES R. GRAY,
PRESIDENT AND EDITOR

Mr. Edwin P. Ansley, Atlanta, Ga., Mar. 28, 1914.

My dear Mr. Ansley:—

I have just examined with great interest your plans for developing a suburban residence section in the vicinity of Oglethorpe University site. This section you have wisely and appropriately named "Oglethorpe Park."

In my opinion it is one of the most important developments that have been projected around Atlanta in years. The natural beauty of the country, its hills and brooks and trees, its accessibility to the city from Peachtree Road, and the numerous winding drives which you have laid out, make it most attractive.

I am glad you have undertaken this development. It means that this park is to be directed by your splendid intelligence and energy to successful accomplishment.

I am especially pleased because of the proximity of this beautiful park to Oglethorpe University. It will add greatly to the attractions of the University grounds, and in this, and other ways will be a great advantage to the institution.

We have practically half a million dollars with which to begin the erection of Oglethorpe University, and expect to have a great deal more. In a short time, just as soon as the preliminary plans have been satisfactorily determined, we shall begin the work of erection. The establishment of Oglethorpe Park will help us greatly in solving some problems that we are to deal with, and I am convinced that the University will be an added attraction to the park.

Your splendid enterprise appeals to me so strongly that I cannot refrain from expressing to you my warm commendation and approval.

I trust you will have the greatest success in carrying out the plans that you have undertaken.

Very truly yours,

John M. Slaton
President Board of Trustees
Oglethorpe University.

ONLY ONE WEEK MORE FOR VOTERS TO REGISTER

Warning to Those Who Want to Vote at State and County Elections

With the total number of voters registered so far estimated by Tax Collector A. P. Stewart at 8,000 short, the books will be open now only for a week longer—until midnight of Monday, April 6.

"Only those voters who register now will be eligible in any state and county elections during 1914," said Tax Collector Stewart, who has charge of the registration. "Many seem to think that they can vote because they registered last year. I want to impress upon these that this a mistake; they must register again now."

So far, only 12,000 have registered, in Mr. Stewart's estimation. And, he says there ought to be 20,000. Two years ago, at the general elections, the registration was 18,000; this might now be increased by at least 2,000 Mr. Stewart says.

The present registration headquarters, 42 West Alabama street, will be supplemented Monday by a branch office at No. 5 Edgewood avenue, in the cigar store of Charles Laganammarino. This office will be managed by Lucien Harris. It is expected that registration will be heavy during the coming week, as many voters always wait until the last few days to register.

"All who want to vote in the elections for county officers on May 5 had better register at once and avoid the trouble," says Collector Stewart.

They come to Atlanta at the invitation of the local organization of the Daughters of America, who persuaded them to include Atlanta in their tour of Georgia cities.

The meeting Monday night will begin at 8 o'clock. It will be public and an interesting program has been prepared. The ministers of the city have been invited to take seats on the rostrum. An orchestra has been engaged.

Mrs. Roth's subject is of especial interest just now on account of the Smith-Burnett immigration bill pending before congress.

SMALL NEGRO BOY GIVES POLICEMAN STIFF FIGHT

Rather than be taken to the police station for the theft of a can of lard from a little boy, Mark Henry, colored, preferred to fight. Consequently he was taken to the Grady hospital with a cracked head and had two stitches taken in his skull.

Officers Haislett and Burfield were called to Cain street to catch a negro who had snatched the can of lard from a boy about 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon. When they arrived on the scene the black had fled into a house at 123 Cain street and been locked up in a closet by the occupants.

When Officer Haislett opened the door of the closet the negro declared he wouldn't be taken and reached for his pocket, found later to contain a six-inch knife. Haislett cracked the knife over the head with a billet and knocked him unconscious.

FOOD DEALERS WARNED TO GET SCREENS READY

A warning to all Atlanta food dealers has been issued at police headquarters that they must remember the screen ordinance goes into effect on April 1.

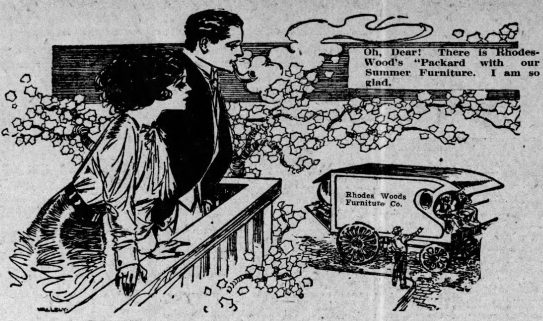

This ordinance provides that all food stores in the open air must be covered with a screen to protect the public from insects and dirt. Many cases have been heard last year for this offense. The police hope that a timely warning will bring better compliance this year.

These Buildings all Started or Completed in Past Two Years

A NEW building soon loses its novelty in a bustling, growing city, and as it is Atlanta's habit to occupy the newest one before it is finished, it soon takes on the style of an old veteran.

Thus it will be surprising to the average Atlantan to realize that the buildings shown in pictures on this page are not over two years old, most of them not that old.

Included there are two office buildings, one barely finished and the other with not all its elevators running. Both have tenants in them, and the older one is nearly full.

And yet it was only recently that the steel frame of these and other buildings in the pictures was being erected. The Healy and Hurt buildings combined represent an outlay of close to $2,000,000; the Ansley Hotel $600,000; the new Hotel Winscott $200,000; the new courthouse a million; the Ponce de Leon apartment house $450,000; the Y. M. C. A. $250,000; the produce men's quarters over $200,000, and so on.

It is only fair to say that we don't do this sort of thing every year, although every building represented here was started or completed since some period in 1912.

All are occupied and doing well, and already there is talk of some really new buildings, as for instance, Dr. Connally's office building at Whitehall and Alabama streets; the Hotel Ansley annex and a large department store building, whose aggregate value will be considerably in excess of $2,000,000.

In the case of office buildings, until the advent of the Hurt and Healy buildings, it was a question of being able to find office space in Atlanta. The new buildings added a supply of over 1,000 offices. By the end of the year, at the rate things are going now, every one of these offices will be taken. Meanwhile the old office buildings are not suffering.

It was the same way with the hotels. The fact that the Hotel Ansley is figuring on an annex would indicate that there is plenty of room for a new hotel in Atlanta.

It may be complimentary for a city to suffer from a famine of office space, keep out of town concerns from local Atlanta did awhile back, but it is a question whether that famine did not suffer from a famine of office space, keep out of town concerns from local Atlanta did awhile back, but it is a

Steadily Declining Stock Market Encouraged Heavy Short Selling

Long Traders Were Disheartened by Constant Injection of New Bearish Factors and Lack of Outside Support

(By Associated Press.)
NEW YORK, March 28.—The stock market, which has proceeded steadily, though slowly, to the first of the week, bringing no increase of buying as quotations receded, today encouraged heavy speculative selling. Traders on the long side were disheartened by the constant injection recently of new bearish factors and by the lack of outside support. They were in no mood to resist efforts to raise the market, and for a time selling was carried on with a fair degree of activity. The shorts aimed their chief activity at the close of the day. United States Steel gave way easily, and shares of independent companies sagged.

That money rates were easier today, owing to the influx of money recently and the slack demand, these conditions at a season of the year when ordinarily there is renewed activity in the money market, was not an indication of unsatisfactory business conditions. The money market, however, failed to show the expected further gain in cash rate of a substantial volume of new money. The statement disclosed a lack of confidence in the money market, which was not an indication of unsatisfactory business conditions.

Money was easy. Total cash $800,000. United States Steel unchanged on call on the market.

AT A TION

TUESDAY, MARCH 29th, 1914

BEFORE THE COURT HOUSE DOOR AT 10 A. M.

Two exceedingly valuable pieces of Central Income Property on Alabama street, belonging to the W. A. Hemphill Estate, on the Northwest corner of Central Avenue and Alabama Street, with railroad frontage.

Also property known as 51 and 53 East Alabama. These properties are under lease and in fact are never vacant.

This is a chance of a life time and under ordinary circumstances these parcels of land would not be upon the market. The property is in a most ideal location, always rented and pays a handsome income, and we are safe in saying that the public will not find this property on the market again in many years. Some day the state will rebuild the old depot and the city will finish the plaza plan in this district, and will make this property worth double its present value.

Mayson, as Commissioners in case of Mrs. Lulu Belle Quinby, et al. vs. Mrs. Margaret Poyam, et al. the same being suit for partition now pending, Case No. 27112 in the Superior Court of Fulton County, Georgia, under and by virtue of an order passed on the 4th day of September, 1912, by the Hon. SIGNS OF THE TIMES

AN announcement of today in The Journal in which will center cortical and widespread interest, not only in Atlanta but throughout the south, is that of the engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Julia Dunning and Judge Walter T. Colquitt. The lovely young bride-elect is the only daughter of Mrs. Ellen Ford Dunning, and her beauty and grace of personality, and her winning charm of manner have endeared her to a wide circle of friends. Miss Dunning, who is a finished musician, has spent much time abroad, where she has studied under famous masters in Paris and Vienna and her wonderful skill and technique combined with an exquisite touch upon the keys have been a marvel to all who have heard her during the winter. Judge Colquitt, who is the son of the late Governor Colquitt, is an able representative of a family long identified with the civic and social interests of the south, and is a prominent member of the Georgia bar. The wedding, which will be an event of the latter part of June, will be solemnized at St. Philip's Cathedral, and will be a beautiful event of the early summer.

WITH the approach of April plans are being made for a series of entertainments which will be given immediately following Easter, and it is anticipated that the post-lenten season year will be unusually gay. A number of charming visiting girls are expected who will be delightfully entertained during their stay, many of whom are expected to remain through the opera season, and who will share in the festivities which will make the week a gala one in the city. The last few weeks have been very quiet socially, few if any, large parties being given, but the musicals and interesting addresses which have been the order of the day, have proved pleasant occasions for informal gatherings. The lecture series have been instructive and delightful and have grown to be such a popular form of entertainment that many will be glad to learn that a number of the club organizations have decided to continue this form of entertainment on increasingly broader lines.

Employees' Profit-Sharing Sale

The "Square Deal" in Business Helps Everyone
SERVICE—the big problem in modern retailing—depends largely upon the attitude of the salespeople.

To implant in our salespeople the desire to know more about their merchandise; to stimulate them to a higher standard of service; to inspire them to give individual, courteous attention to each customer—this is the problem of service we hope to solve through

Our Profit-Sharing Plan

The Profit-Sharing Plan works in a circle. The more sympathetic interest the salesperson shows in his customer, the more merchandise he sells. The more merchandise he sells, the better he serves us and our patronage. The better he serves, the greater his compensation. It's the square deal which works to the betterment of all.

Properly to impress our salespeople with the benefits of Profit-Sharing, and thoroughly to emphasize its operations, we start the Profit-Sharing Plan off with a

Week of Special Offerings

in which every department in the house joins.

Selling this new merchandise right before Easter at a third, a fourth, or a half under the regular price will be like fun for the salespeople. And when they receive their weekly pay checks they will know how well it pays them to give the customer their very best service.

Sale starts Monday and lasts through Saturday

INTERESTING GOSSIP OF INTERESTING PEOPLE

Homesites the world over will read with interest this clever observation on a subject which deep in her heart every woman knows to be true. While not a new step, and certainly not a graceful one, the intricacies of the dance are indulged in many times each day in the average household.

The following is the description of the "Kitchen Waltz":

Is the tango immoral? Is the maxixe unbecomingly? Are the Heintz and the Gaby Glide unbecomingly? But none of these are as harmful as "The Kitchen Waltz," so says Mrs. Christine Frederick, author of "The New Housekeeping." Mrs. Frederick writes in the New York Evening Sun:

"While the tango is danced by comparatively few of society's elite, the kitchen waltz is indulged in daily by thousands of women all over the country who are their own chief cook and bottle washer."

"This is the way it is done. A woman decides to make an omelet, she trots gracefully to the left to the icebox, removes the eggs and flits hastily toward the stove, advances carefully (proceeding the bowl) to the kitchen stove. Another pause at the stove, and she reverses twenty feet back to the pantry to get a platter. She makes one more trip of twenty feet back to the table, makes another last side to the stove. That is the kitchen waltz."

"Yes, day after day women take any number of steps, and go through any number of figures and convolutions in the different tasks they do about the kitchen—from stove to table, to pantry, across to sink and back to the stove, and so on in an endless series of figures, trots, steps, slides and glides, which are more complex than any maxixe we have seen."

"All this movement solely because the equipment of the kitchen is poorly arranged."

Foot Dies, and Lights Goes Out in Provence.

During the past week in Marseilles, France, Frederic Mistral, the celebrated Provencal poet, died in his eighty-fourth year. In 1864 Mistral divided the Nobel prize for literature with Ibsen, the Spanish dramatist. He was a friend of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, to whom he dedicated a poem in 1894. Most of his works were written in the Provencal dialect. His best-known poem was "Mireille," written in 1859.

"Not only his native Provence but all the Latin countries will mourn Frederic Mistral. He leaves all a very loving memory in the hearts of all the smaller racial groups. Poland, Finland, the Basque lands, Wales, as they fight to keep alive disappearing things as old as the world. Rostand alone was better known in France than Mistral, who never used the French language except in translations of his own works. He faithfully clung to the Provencal dialect, the dialect of the troubadours and of the old kingdom of Provence. A constant advocate of decentralization, political, literary and linguistic, he frequently repeated that 'he who holds to his mother tongue holds the key' which shall free him from his chains."

He died as spring comes to Provence, which is nearly fulfillment of his life wish that he should pass away "on some warm summer day when the crickets would fill the air with their metallic song, like unto the song of the sharpening hammer striking the anvil's blade."

"Have You Flown?" Latest Cry.

"Have you flown?" is the little query which is exciting even more interest in society today than the tango or the war between the hotels and the supper clubs. Not long ago aviation and security were scarcely regarded as synonymous, but the new science has now fairly "found its feet" and the aerial tour is likely to become quite popular within the very near future. In London the extent to which aviation has "caught on" in society is illustrated by the report that a youthful lord has resigned his commission in the Royal Horse Guards to study the art of flying in France. His sister is also working hard for her pilot's certificate. At the Henderson aerodrome Mr. Graham-White recalled that Lord Carbery had performed a fine flight from Paris to London, and that other pilots who had graduated at his establishment included Sinclair and Sir Bryan Leighton.

"The well known persons who have flown with me could be numbered by the score," said Mr. Graham-White. "Here are just a few: The Duke of Sutherland, Prince Christopher of Greece, Lord Huron of Kelliston, who was one of my first passengers; Lord Drogheda, Lord Fortington, Lord Deborrough, Admiral Sir Edward Seymour, Sir

Thomas Lipton, Sir Richard Paget, Mr. Arthur Halford, Mr. Reginald McKenna and Colonel Seely. And the ladies—here are a few selections from the book: The Duchess of Rutland, Lady Ponsonby, Lady Drogheda, Lady Fortington, Lady Diana Manners, Lady Limerick, the Hon. Mrs. Ascheton Harbord, the Hon. Monica Grenfell and Lady Tree.

"The danger of flying has been greatly exaggerated; the statistics show that there has been only one fatal accident to every 35,000 miles flown, which for an industry in its infancy is pretty good. And then the cost promises soon to be no greater than that of automobilizing. Our aerial charabancs travel at fifty miles an hour with five passengers at a cost of sixpence a mile for every four people."

"Aerial touring will soon be as popular as automobilizing; nothing could be more delightful than gliding over England in the summer time at the rate of thirty miles a day, and parties of three or four could easily be accommodated on one machine. Once you are in the air the feeling of security is extraordinary."

The Ladies of Atlanta Enhance their Personal Charm By the Use of Herpicide

It is a significant fact that Atlanta people use more Newbro's Herpicide than any equal number of people elsewhere.

Desiring always to appear at their best the ladies of Atlanta have been quick to recognize the beauty of their hair than anything else. They are justly proud of the radiance and lustre of their tresses, made possible by having hair that is clean and healthy and a scalp free from dandruff. It is much to their personal appearance.

At that time, both the remedy and the theory was ridiculed. But since then Herpicide has achieved an almost marvelous success and the story of its astonishing merits has penetrated to every corner of the world.

Now the Herpicide claim and Herpicide advertising have been freely copied by the manufacturers of other scalp remedies. Bear in mind too, that during this change of front the point. Why should you experiment with something, claimed to be as good as Herpicide, and department store in Atlanta.

The "just as good" kind is good for the substitutor's cash register but is not good for your scalp.

Applications of real Herpicide can be obtained at any good barber shop. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. Sold and guaranteed at all drug stores. A trial bottle 10 cents—A booklet FREE—Send for both.

ALL of your GARDEN and FLORAL needs ARE FOUND IN THE HASTINGS' BOOK of SEEDS

Not only a book of seeds, but a book of splendid and useful garden information as well. It's free to you on request. Mother Nature is awakening. Already some of the earliest of the fruit trees have bloomed. The leaf buds on the shade and forest trees are swelling, and almost before we know it all the trees will be in full leaf and beautiful again.

At this time of year the call of the soil is almost irresistible, and why should you or we resist that call? It's Nature's call, and answering it means renewed health and energy, the yards and lawns a picture of beauty, and in the vegetable garden will be found the practical—the health-saving as well as the money-saving, through healthful exercise and an abundant production of fresh, crisp vegetables, that cuts down store and market bills amazingly.

It is garden time now, regardless of small interruptions by a cold rain or two, a sharp wind or possibly an occasional light frost. Nature knows when it is time to begin her annual growth, and man succeeds best as he treads most closely in Nature's footsteps. It's "garden time" in Georgia, according to Mother Nature, and no one is so wise as she.

Safe now to plant all the semi-hardy vegetables, such as lettuce, beets, radishes, carrots, turnips, onions, spinach, mustard, cabbage, etc. Within two weeks all the tender sorts can be planted—beans, squashes, cucumbers, cantaloupes, watermelons, corn, sweet pepper, eggplant—all of those things that go to make your table appetizing and enjoyable.

The vegetables are the practical. Let's not forget the beautiful—the flowers that, once planted, stay with us through the summer, beautifying alike the yard, the porches and the vases on the tables. Last, but not least, don't forget the lawns; wherever they need renewing entirely or where bare spots need "filling in."

Regardless of whether you are interested in the vegetable garden, the lawn, or flowers, either from seed direct or the bedding plants from pots such as geraniums, coleus, salvias, etc., you will always find Hastings' the place to supply your needs. Seed and plant quality always right, and of varieties suited to our Southern soil and climate.

Hastings' Seeds are the standard of seed excellence and purity in all the Southern States. Through our Mail Order Department alone over 300,000 seed buyers are served with right quality, right variety seeds each year. Every Atlanta and Southern buyer can get the benefit of the services of a world-wide seed-growing organization that seeks to serve the seed buyer and planter best in Atlanta and in the South.

CLEAN UP, THEN BREAK UP AND PLANT

The Atlanta papers during the past few days have urged a "clean-up" of Atlanta. Why? Because in May we are to be visited by thousands of the "Shriners" from all parts of the United States, and we seek to make the very best of impressions on the visitors that we are glad to welcome.

We agree fully with this "clean-up" proposition, but why not go further and have not only a "cleaned-up" Atlanta, but a beautiful Atlanta as well, not only during the Shriners' week, but all through the year. It's well worth while.

A clean Atlanta and a continuously beautiful Atlanta all the year depends, not on a committee, or on the newspapers, but on you—the owner of a home in or near Atlanta. It is strictly up to you as to whether you will make your yard clean and beautiful, not only during Shriners' week, but all the time.

The city can look after its parks, the children after the school grounds, but these are small compared with the tens of thousands of lots and yards in Atlanta that can be and should be made beauty spots not only for the "Shriners," but for ourselves and the tens, yes, hundreds of thousands of visitors that come to Atlanta every summer and fall.

Flags and bunting have their place and a large place in the decoration of Atlanta or any city on any special occasion. Atlanta or any other city may be ablaze from one end to the other with electric lights, but the impression that the visiting Shriner or any other visitor is going to carry away is not so much one of flags or bunting or electric lights, but an impression of clean, well-kept lawns, of flower beds in sight and porches filled with ferns and decorative plants. These are the things that really count, not only on special occasions, but all the time.

The Hastings business is some 24 years old. It has back of it a lifetime of experience in seed growing and seed selling in the South. It has back of it a world-wide seed-growing organization, not only on paper, but in fact. The Hastings business knows what you need in seeds and plants, and supplies them, and you will find the Hastings Catalogue for 1914 a splendid helper in making your selections.

The greenhouses from which our supplies of bedding and decorative plants come are filled, almost to overflowing, with the very best there is in plant variety and plant quality. Hastings' is the one house in Atlanta that you can absolutely depend on for right quality in your seed and plant supplies for 1914.

Further, we treat our seed-buying friends absolutely fair, in quality and price. No cut price, poor quality seeds or plants, no common seeds sold under high sounding names at double prices for half quantity packets. Right quantity of right quality at right prices is the Hastings way of doing business.

Come and see us and get a catalogue. If not convenient to come, just phone us either for catalogue or your order. Either will be delivered promptly. If out of the city, a postal will bring a catalogue.

Crackers Fell Before Boston Boys; Score 7-4

Stallings' Crew Won Over Smith's Men by Bunching Attack—Got Lead in First, and Were Never Headed

After several days of rather reprehensible conduct from the standpoint of the baseball fan, the Weather Man assumed a more kindly attitude for a brief period Saturday afternoon, and the Crackers and Boston Braves were permitted to stage the game scheduled for Friday night at the stadium.

A bright sunshiny period, beginning shortly after noon, and lasting until the game had gotten well under way, induced by far the best crowd that has been seen at the stadium since this spring, to come out to gaze on the festivities. It mattered not that heavy hatching clouds chased Old Sol before the game was finished, and that a downpour of rain flooded the stands shortly after the contest was finished. A horde of bugs were on hand, and many lapped the Crackers in action for the first time this season. The game itself was a rather common place affair except in spots, which means that it would about fill the bill produced in some hundred or more contests of a regular league season. The Braves won by a fair margin, as they were rather expected to do, and they were chiefly because they concentrated their attack and delivered their punches, by outdistancing the distance, as a prize fight fan might express it.

Billikens Are Fast Rounding Into Top Form

Manager Bobby Gilks, Assisted by Catcher Jack Kleinow, Is Whipping His Material Into Shape—Gets Two New Men From Burns, and Expects Other Help

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 28.—The Billikens, under the leadership of Manager Bobby Gilks, assisted by Jack Kleinow, the former Yankee catcher, are fast rounding into shape. All of the candidates for the 1914 Billikens are now here, the last to report being Third Base Man Bill Elwert, who was competing in an Ohio bowling tournament and requested that he be allowed to report after the others, which request was granted by Manager Gilks.

Gilks has six candidates for outfielders, and he is looking for a few more. He is certain of landing regular berths and the leaves McDowell, who was here for a short time the latter part of last season. Showers, a semi-pro from Mississippi, and Malone, an Auburn college star, to complete with an outfielder to be recruited from St. Louis Americans for the other outfield berth. Of the three named, McDowell has the call, but he will get plenty of competition before landing the job.

In the infield Gilks is pretty well fixed. He has a double, out of four trips to the man. Eleven putouts and one assist were handled by him without a single error. Donaldson and Tyler Montague also played in the sixth inning and counted one run.

Local Collegians Took First Contest of Scheduled Double-Header by Score of 10-5—Rain Prevented Second

In the first game of a scheduled double bill between Tech and Auburn Saturday afternoon, Tech was victorious by the count of 10 to 5 making it one of the best of the season. The second game was stopped in the second inning by rain.

Tech played almost errorless ball in the field, only two errors being made by them during the entire nine innings, neither of which resulted seriously. Auburn, on the other hand, made eight blunders in the field, which helped Tech to win the struggle.

Urbethon, behind the bat, had a good day, getting nine hits off of Davis' bat of them came in the sixth inning and were made when his mount runs. Davis, with the exception of the sixth inning pitched good ball, he fanned two men and issued one free pass. But, dear Mrs. Gilman, what are women to do with their time when the kitchenless home arrives? Already, I have seen the women of the city, in all social ranks, etc., have subjected them to ennui all most intolerable. Bridge whist has its limitations. MARIST HAS COACH FOR THEIR BASEBALL

Ware Holliday, Old Tech Star, Has Taken Charge of Cadets

BY EUGENE OBERDORFER.
Marist college announces that a coach for baseball has been engaged to enter the Marist team up the road to Pennington for the 1914 season. On last Friday, Ware Holliday, sometimes known as "Goat," signed with the college as athletic coach for baseball. Goat is an experienced baseball man, as he has played on the Georgia Tech team and in a professional way at Waycross. It is believed that Goat has something up his sleeve and by April 2, the date for opening the prep league, it is expected that he will play a trump card for the cadets. Marist this year has a large number of new candidates for the varsity, and a few men of former days are back to win fame again for Marist on the diamond.

For twirlers the cadets look towards Bratton, Brock and Gene Wright, all of whom are likely youngsters and possess powers which only need to be polished. Behind the bat are the former infield candidates are Adair, McCall, McCann and Taffey, while the numerous embryo outfielders include Moss, Cheves, Callaway, Manning, Beaton Lewis and LePage Lewis. The athletes of the school are proud of their basketball work and are not ashamed or puffed about losing the pennant. They know they strove and succeeded, and attribute their loss solely to the lack of a coach and the Marist cadets for a team representing a first-class preparatory school. On last Thursday the Marist Fathers moved into their commodious new residence. The cadets with them success and prosperity in their new apartment. A new club is being formed by some of the officers of Marist. The club will be known as "The Swagler Club," and will select and elect a president and officers. Further details will be announced later.

The cadet corps is now working under the personal direction of Captain E. W. Wilson, Jr., S. S. A. and is preparing for a government inspection and expects to receive some very high marks. Edgewood Defeated Crew In Hot Basketball Game

This beautiful spring weather is making us all feel like it. Edgewood has been playing very well, and a few months hence we expect to see a perfect "Garden of Eden" where there was once a field of weeds. We have been working on our athletic team, and for the first time in some time, we have won a game. The girls' basketball team met with the crew of Edgewood on Wednesday, March 17, where a closely contested game was played. Edgewood won by a score of 14 to 10. DONALD FRASER'S BALL KIRKWOOD PUPIL WRITES

TECH SHOWS UP WELL REMARKABLE COMPOSITION

Line-Up Includes Experienced Players - Speakers Chosen.
Donald Fraser is turning out much better than was expected at first of the season. Every place is being filled by fellows of a great deal of experience. Burgess, the catcher, is showing up unusually well in spite of his size. He is almost as sure with the "pill" as with goal shooting. For pitchers, Emmett and Pollock. Emmett has played several years with south Georgia teams and promises to be a wonder. Pollock has the team behind him and is sure to be heard from.

The initial bag is held by either Phillips or Lewis both of whom have had experience in this place. Malloy, a Florida lad, gives the keystone bag to suit the queen's taste.

Miss Hollins and a few men of former days are back to win fame again for Marist on the diamond. For twirlers the cadets look towards Bratton, Brock and Gene Wright, all of whom are likely youngsters and possess powers which only need to be polished. Behind the bat are the former infield candidates are Adair, McCall, McCann and Taffey, while the numerous embryo outfielders include Moss, Cheves, Callaway, Manning, Beaton Lewis and LePage Lewis.

It is indeed too early to speculate as to about Holliday's selections, for he has hardly had time to measure his. The athletes of the school are proud of their basketball work and are not ashamed or puffed about losing the pennant. They know they strove and succeeded, and attribute their loss solely to the lack of a coach and the Marist cadets for a team representing a first-class preparatory school.

On last Thursday the Marist Fathers moved into their commodious new residence. The cadets with them success and prosperity in their new apartment. A new club is being formed by some of the officers of Marist. The club will be known as "The Swagler Club," and will select and elect a president and officers. Further details will be announced later.

The cadet corps is now working under the personal direction of Captain E. W. Wilson, Jr., S. S. A. and is preparing for a government inspection and expects to receive some very high marks. Some companies are doing well in their work. However, Company B is in the lead, and is gradually improving and expects to run a close second.

BETTER BABIES ARE PLANNED FOR GEORGIA

Mothers' Congress Hopes to Raise $1,000 for Educational Campaign

Advocating in part eugenics and sex hygiene, the Georgia branch of the National Congress of Mothers has issued an appeal to the public to contribute to the better babies in Georgia.

That is the exact amount needed to establish a permanent child welfare exhibit in Georgia's largest cities and to extend child hygiene work in every district in the state.

Today the Georgia branch of the National Congress of Mothers begins a campaign to raise the money. They are appealing to the public to contribute this sum, a small one for such a great work, to save hundreds of little children from the death-dealing results of ignorance.

Send what you can to the treasurer of the extension department of the congress, Mrs. W. H. Wiers, 175 West Peachtree street.

The campaign grows out of an offer made to the Georgia branch of the Mothers' Congress by the National Child Welfare exhibit committee, of New York.

Under the auspices of the national exhibit, a child welfare exhibit was held in Atlanta last fall that was far-reaching in its benefit to the public.

It is to perpetuate the work of that exhibit that $1,000 is being raised for the national exhibit is to be underwritten by an exhibit to be sent to Georgia, covering these general heads: health of the child, eugenics and sex hygiene, education of the child, recreation of the child, moral education of the child.

The Georgia branch of the Mothers' Congress is to provide the Georgia state exhibit, to be held in Atlanta last fall that was far-reaching in its benefit to the public.

While the $100 guarantee is being raised, the Georgia Mothers' congress also wishes to raise more money for the purpose of extending the work of the state to teach child hygiene to the parents of the state.

The Georgia branch of the Mothers' Congress is to provide the Georgia state exhibit, to be held in Atlanta last fall that was far-reaching in its benefit to the public.

With the $1000 the leaders of the movement believe children in Georgia can be aided in two ways, through the child welfare exhibit and through the teaching of child hygiene to the parents of the state.

MCLURE CO. RECEIVES
UNIQUE TRADE LETTER

Rosebud, Ga., Firm Declares
in Favor of Buying Goods
by Mail

Every knight of the sample kit would be out of a job if every concern took the stand of a general merchandise firm at the town of Rosebud, Ga.

In a circular letter this firm, C. E. Upshaw & Co., have told the various wholesalers from whom they buy that they "find it absolutely necessary to discontinue buying goods through drummers."

Through the McClure Ten-Cent company, who do a mail order business and are therefore quite in accord with Mr. Upshaw's sentiments, this letter comes to the writing. Idea.

Whether an unusual number of drummers must go and we are the first way over the four miles from Rosebud, Ga., to the town of Rosebud, is not clear from his statement.

As to reasons for his stand, he says in a letter to the McClure company, "I must go and we are the first in the country to realize that the cost of traveling men in a direct tax on the retailer as well as his customer."

Here is the circular, copies of which have been received by several Atlanta business men.

We beg to advise that we find it absolutely necessary for our firm to discontinue buying goods through drummers. Without going into details of our reasons for same will say we have reasons better known to ourselves. This will cut off all firms who are engaged in getting our business. In the future we will buy and expect, and must have best prices and discounts.

As to the McClure company, we wish to request a statement of every bill before discounting is out. At any time you have any business with us as the expense of doing business by mail is much cheaper than otherwise.

We beg to remain,
Yours very truly,
O. E. UPSHAW

YOUNG KETCHUP SALESMAN
ENJOYS BIG BUSINESS

Among the young salesmen of Atlanta, who are making good with a rush, is John M. Wood, Jr., city representative of the Globe Preserving company of Baltimore. Mr. Wood began his duties with the Globe company on January 1. He was new out only to his company, but also to the Atlanta trade, but he has been successful from the start and finds that his trade is continually increasing.

"There is a very good reason for the splendid trade we are enjoying in Atlanta," said Mr. Wood. "Our company's products are of such fine quality that they become favorites wherever they are sold or used, and the result is constant repeat orders. I am delighted with our increasing business."

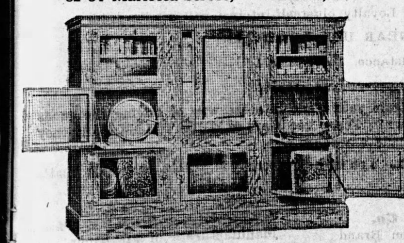

Before the first of the year our company's sales were principally of our well known Bull Head brand of catsup in ten cent size bottles and their various jellies. Since January we have added to our line peanut butter, preserves, chili sauce and twenty-five cent size Bull Head catsup and all the line is now going strong.

REVIEW OF 10,000 TOYS
ENDED AT MONTAG BROS.

Work Progressing on Handsome New Sample
Room

The selection of three thousand samples from ten thousand submitted to them by the German toy manufacturers is a task recently finished at Montag Bros.

Adolph and Will Montag, who have their work in hand, spent an entire week in the toy sample room looking after this selection. The first two days of the time are spent entirely in a general survey of the different lines without giving any attention whatever to actual selection.

The toys come back each year to this big jobbing house in several consignments. The selected samples, which themselves make a big stock of toys, are disposed of to the retail trade at special rates.

Remodeling of the larger of the two sample rooms at this house will soon be finished. The new sample room, recently fitted out, presents an excellent appearance and when the old one, now in the hands of the workmen, is finished this company will have display rooms unsurpassed in the south.

The larger room is to have rows of booths extending around three sides which will give great efficiency in the utilization of the space.

NEW MONTAG SALESMAN TO TRAVEL TEXAS AND GA.

This new Montag traveler believes if the salesman has a good time and knows it thoroughly that the personality feature is a minor consideration, but he is a salesman who need not take this view in self defense.

He comes to the Atlanta house with a good record at the selling game and is likely to push somebody for sales record at this concern.

The concern recently established a branch at Jacksonville and are planning to establish one at Birmingham in the near future.

One of the youngest salesmen traveling out of Atlanta is Mack Hirschberg, whose twenty-first birthday is still six months ahead, but he has already placed himself among the leaders with his house after only nine months on the road.

He secured mighty little business the first month out but had the perseverance and recently has been getting the orders like an old-timer on the firing line.

The young traveler comes from a family of traveling salesmen, his father, E. A. Hirschberg, and the latter's two brothers having all spent many years out with the sample cases.

Three opening bills have already been sent by the McClure company, that were directly due to the letters to the mayors and a number of inquiries, some of which will likely develop into sales, were secured from interested merchants.

G. A. Shirley, connected with the wholesale hat trade of Atlanta for many years, is now traveling for the Kohn, Vell & Co. of New Orleans. There is proof that Frank Corry has sold some goods in that recent real estate transaction. He has bought a nice bit of Atlanta dirt out near Highland and Virginia avenues.

John P. Fieger has been sending some weather reports to his house recently. He is not one of these firing liners with the weather report habit but when they do have bad weather in the mountain territory it is his habit. The Lamar & Rankin "mountain wonder" is distributing pills at a good rate in spite of bad roads, however, says the house.

Crane Co. to Put Ingenious Calf "Weaner" on Market

E. D. Crane & Co. have recently adopted a novel device to their line of agricultural implements which will undoubtedly find a big sale as soon as its merits can be known.

It is a calf and cow weaner. The device, which is known as the "Kant-Buk," is so made that it fits in the nose of the calf, falling over the calf's mouth when it attempts to suck, but falling away from its mouth when it lowers its head to drink water or graze. It possesses all the qualities for a successful method of preventing either a calf or cow from sucking.

"We are sure that every cattle raiser will find the new device particularly useful," said Mr. Crane. "They can be had cheap, 35 cents apiece and therefore can be used for a large number of cattle at a small expense."

FORMER TRAVELER, ILL. ASKS FOR ASSISTANCE

Editor Firing Line: I am flat on my back but will write as plain as I can. I am an old Firing Line, but have worked very little since January. I have been in bed since January 19th with a bad case of tuberculosis.

I have a two-room box house in edge of town. My money is out except for a few dollars the C. L. Adams boys sent me. E. L. Adams company and Swift & Co. were the last houses I worked for. I know most of the salesmen out of Atlanta and if you would kindly send me to get after the boys to help me. I have no other means of getting help. Am too weak to write more. Thanking you in advance, I am,

FOUR CARLOADS RUGS FOR ROSENFELD CO.

One carload well on the way and three others due here during April and May, is the rate at which rugs from Japan are being sent to the Rosenfeld company this spring.

Thirty thousand square yards of rugs to the car is the average for this class of goods, and the Rosenfeld company handles more this year than ever before.

A novelty in rugs on which the firm has made its third importation since January 1, is what is known as the German axminster seamless rug.

Sidney Ruan, the efficient and popular shipping clerk of the E. L. Adams company is very fastidious about the rugs which he gets midway and he has had considerable trouble recently in finding a place to suit his taste, but Doc Westbrook and W. A. Quarrel, who keep a friendly eye upon Mr. Ruan, declared that he has at last discovered a lunch place that is in every way to his liking and will now go nowhere else.

J. O. Chambers' merchant friends have not had the pleasure of seeing him recently because he has been hard at work at headquarters getting out the new fall line of samples to the Brown, Perryman & Greene company travelers. Last week about finished the job.

Zack Daniel, of the Hagan-Malone company, was traveling yesterday but it was strictly a pleasure trip. He keeps that car busy on the roads about Atlanta every week-end.

Continued increased sales from all of the Tip Top bakeries are reported for the past week. These bakeries have shown a steady increase in their sales each week for sometime and the management is looking forward with much interest to a very large business for the spring and summer months.

The largest order of last week at the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company was taken by Tom Yon, the Florida salesman.

Mr. William Fisch, of the American Bakeries Corporation, has spent most of the past week at the New South Bakery. Mr. Fisch is ever anxious to improve the character and quality of goods turned out from the various plants of the company and gives the salesmen in finding a place to suit his taste, but Doc Westbrook and W. A. Quarrel, who keep a friendly eye upon Mr. Ruan, declared that he has at last discovered a lunch place that is in every way to his liking and will now go nowhere else.

Continued increased sales from all of the Tip Top bakeries are reported for the past week. These bakeries have shown a steady increase in their sales each week for sometime and the management is looking forward with much interest to a very large business for the spring and summer months.

The largest order of last week at the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company was taken by Tom Yon, the Florida salesman.

Rosenfeld Co. to Introduce Novelty Italian Curtains

The European buyer of the Rosenfeld company has sent to this firm in Atlanta samples of curtains from Italy.

The new line which arrived last week will soon be presented to the house furnishing goods trade throughout the south and is expected to prove quite popular because of its novelty.

The line includes curtains with scarfs to match, an idea that is rather new to the trade of this section.

With Atlanta Council No. 18

By E. M. LAMBERT, Secretary.
Atlanta Council No. 18 will go to the grand council in Jacksonville with a membership of 106 Councils. It had the biggest increase of membership in the entire grand division last year. It hopes to make as good a showing this year.

We have recently reinstated in Council No. 18, H. C. Tuggle, J. D. O'Rear and W. E. Harbour.

We are glad to see Brother W. E. Harbour on the streets again after being confined at home for some time with an attack of tonsillitis.

Brother U. L. Cox, new senior counselor, is wearing the honors of his office easily. He is displaying great enthusiasm in the work for the coming year and is active not only in getting new members but in seeing that the old ones come to the meetings regularly.

A big class of candidates were initiated last Saturday.

Brother E. S. Jordan is a hustler not only in his own business, but councils of the U. C. T. He was seen Saturday morning with a big bundle under his arm and a brisk pace to his walk, visiting the trade.

In Which We Make Things Perfectly Clear

Somebody tells this yarn:

A prim and eminently proper New Jersey school marm had been greatly annoyed by revelry in the hotel where she had spent part of her last vacation. She took the precaution this time, in writing to another hotel which had been recommended to her, to inquire whether it had a bar.

She received the following reply:

"No, we haven't any bar; and if that is the sort of woman you are we don't want you. The place for you is Yardley's, farther up the road."

Misapprehension eads to funny complications sometimes.

We don't want anybody to misunderstand us. We want everybody to know exactly what we're up to, and why.

We are a little community of manufacturers doing teamwork.

We are jointly paying for the privilege of telling the public what we make, where we make it, and how good it is.

Our object in life is to make our product the very best product of its kind, and to sell the most of it that we possibly can sell.

Home manufacturers, all of us.

Georgia money. Georgia brains. Georgia enterprise. Georgia employees. Georgia pay rolls. Georgia spendings.

Why not Georgia consumers?

Now then, that's what's on our mind.

That's why we are pulling together. We are ALL after the same result. Nobody could misunderstand it, do you think?

Georgia Products Day was a fine thing. It unlocked torrents of oratory. It made us proud of ourselves and our good old state.

It brought out a vast quantity of beautiful sentiment—of the right kind, too.

But why should the tumult and the shouting die and the folks forget the splendid lessons of loyalty that the day brought forth?

Why not make every day Georgia Day—in the stores, in the homes, in the jobbing houses, among the women folk, in the schools, and on the farms?

Why, in the name of common sense, shouldn't Georgia use her own home-manufactured goods?

Alex Stephens thought she ought to. So did Henry Grady. So does every loyal man and woman who gives the least bit of attention to the question of economics—or of economy, for that matter.

If you MERCHANTS will help us in this campaign for the wider distribution AMONG OUR OWN FOLKS of the goods that we make here at home—you'll be doing a vital piece of work for your state.

Incidentally, you'll be putting one over for your own self.

You can't blink the fact that what PAYS you is the main thing. We don't want you to.

We don't blink it ourselves, so far as we are concerned. We are in business for profit, plain, straight profit.

This campaign, then, is based on a sound and well justified desire to produce PROFITS for us all.

We are willing to let this be thoroughly understood.

Loyalty is the lever. Loyalty plus self-interest will lift the load.

You merchants are NEAR US. Less freight.

You are in talking distance. Less time.

You are in reach of supply. Less trouble.

Why not use us and train your trade into the way of buying the goods that cost you less laid down? These goods are MADE AT HOME, and they are as worthy as goods made anywhere else.

Be sensible, Merchants. Let us hear from you. Join the team that's pulling for prosperity.

YOUR OWN PICTURE OF GERALDINE FARRAR AND A GERMAN ARTIST'S DRAWINGS OF OTHER METROPOLITAN SINGERS

By Dudley Glass

SHE wasn't a "society woman." She wasn't one of the musical set. She hadn't purchased a whole spring outfit of clothes at one time since the children began to grow up. But she was buying a season ticket to the opera, and she and the neighbor who came with her considered long and carefully before choosing two seats in G-Right, Dress Circle. They fumbled for crumpled currency in old-fashioned hand-bags, took the coveted pasteboards and started out, happily.

"Going to the opera this year?" I asked. Oh, certainly it was a fool-

ish question, but one must open a conversation some way. I wanted to know just why two every-day, home-folksy, middle-aged women were investing so much money in opera tickets—money which might have bought a hat or a summer dress or a new chair for the living room. "You see, I don't spend much on luxuries," said the woman I questioned. "But if a man can brook loose every now and then and take a fishing trip or go to a convention of his lodge, why shouldn't a woman have a real good time once a year?" I never cared for opera until a year ago. Always thought it was a fad, a society affair like a horse show, or something intended only for people who had studied music all their lives. I don't go in for society, don't know a note of music, and I can't afford fads.

"But one afternoon—two years ago—a friend had an extra ticket to the opera. She asked me to go, and I went—more from curiosity than any real desire. I felt a bit out of place at first. The music was so hard to understand. There were so few tunes in it. And then I gave up trying to read the libretto or understand the action and just began to listen. And I heard such music as I never heard before. I bought a ticket to the next opera, and enjoyed that even more. I went three times last year, and this spring I saved up enough for a season ticket. My seats are way up in the circle, and I'm not

ON DIPLOMATIC INDISCRETIONS

BY FINLEY PETER DUNNE

"Th' first thin' he knows about a war that's broke out is whin he goes around to call on th' king an' a sentry jabs him with a baynit."

"Th' American ambassadee convulsed th' aujence be appearin' in blackface an' singin' a quaint southern melody entitled, 'Down Where the Waskaloosa Flows.'"

"I've been thinkin' about this problem iv th' unemployed," said Mr. Dooley. "There's wurruk fr' ivrybody that wants wurruk an' manny that don't," said Mr. Hennessy.

"I'm not thinkin' about th' same thing that ye ar-re," said Mr. Dooley. "I am wondhrin' to England to entertain th' English people without speakin' in public. It's a tur-rôle strain on thim, it's a tur-rôle strain on us, an' it's a good deal iv a strain on th' English people. Not that I care much what happens to our hereditary inmates or cousins, but it makes me onaisy to wake up in th' mornin' an' larn that th' American ambassadee in order to amuse th' annyooal meetin' iv th' Hon'able Guild iv Deck Hands has offered to turn over Michigan to th' Canajen government because iv th' gratitooch he feels toward Willum Shakespeare.

"In th' old days, Hinnessy, we made a man an ambassadee to England because he'd been successful as a horse thrader. In thim times we were a young an' strugglin' nation that needed frinds, an' we didn't dare to take any chances. Whin th' ol' fathers iv th' counthry were lookin' fr' a suitable ripresentative they didn't pick out a man because he'd just sint a pome on spring to th' Atlantic Monthly. No, sir; they looked fr' some wan with a knowledge iv burglary an' a good poker face. Silas Wiggins has been appointed ambassadee extraordin'ry an' minister plenipotinchry to th' court iv Saint James. Th' prisdint was first attracted to Misher Wiggins' qualifications fr' this high office be seein' him bet a busted flush. In thim days diplomacy was like poker. Silas sat in th' game with ol' Palmerston an' Disraeli an' Gladstun, held his cards close up to his chest, dealt fr'm th' bottom iv need he showed no enthusyasm except when he threw th' six iv clubs to four diamonds, an' wud no more have thought iv bein' gin'rous over a threaty thin iv settin' with his back to a lookin' glass while he was playin'. Ye never heard Silas sayin' 'It's yours' till he'd looked over th' showdown to see that there wasn't a club mixed up with th' spade flush. An' don't ye make any mistake about thim ol' la-ads not bein' able to hold their own in th' game. No, sir; if Silas won an' got th' Alaska boundry pushed over a couple iv miles our way, he had good reason to be proud iv himself. They settin' up at th' close iv th' avenin's intertainmint an' made an engagemint fr' another rassle on th' followin' night. An' Metternich or Talleyrand took Silas be th' arm an' they went home singin' close harmony an' were th' best iv frinds till they met again.

"But diplomacy is diff'rent nowadays, d'ye mind. It's more like international chess an' is played be cable. In order to keep up with what is goin' on th' ambassadee has to get out arly an' buy th' mornin' papers. Th' first thing he knows about a war that's broke out between th'

two counthies is whin he goes around to call on th' king an' a sentry jabs him with a baynit. In a few years fr'm now governments will be thransactin' all business over a long distance tellyphone, an' th' ambassadee will be instructed not to talk with th' switchboard op'ator.

"Th' prisdint looks over a list iv th' acquaintances he's made durin' th' campaign, an' says he: 'So-an-so is much run down be th' pursuit iv lithrachoor. I wonder if he's saved anything an' can afford a vacation. Let's make him ambassadee to th' court iv Saint James.' So his names goes into th' sinit, an' th' sinitors reads his books to see that he has said nawthin' that wud hurt th' feelin' iv th' south, an' he gets th' job. He calls around at th' White House fr' instructions. There ain't anny. 'I'd like to be advised how to act over any great questions iv state that may arise,' says he, with wan hand in th' chest iv his coat. 'Don't ye bother ye'er head about matters that don't consarn ye,' says th' prisdint. 'Run along an' injie ye'erself. See Shakespeare's tomb, dhrop in at Westminster abbey, have a good time,' he says, slappin' th' ambassadee on th' back an' gently shovin' him toords th' dure. 'Be light hearted an' gay. Amuse th' British popylace. Let ye'er motto be, 'Always lave thim laughin' whin ye go away.' If ye can sing or whistle, so much th' better,' he says. 'Remember that ye follow in th' futsteps iv Haverly's minstrels an' be as comic as ye can,' he says. "So th' ambassadee departs on his high mission. Whin he arrives in London he disposes iv th' usual routine iv complainin' because th' rints are higher thin in Peory, an' he is not compelled be law to wear th' kind iv pants an' coat that wud sootably uphold th' dignity iv this great republic in th' courts iv Europe. An' whin these jooties are accomplished he has got to go out on an intertain. Mind ye, there's no harder task in th' wuruld thin to make a hearty Briton laugh without ye break a leg or set down on ye'er hat. Th' older a civilization is th' harder it is to find a new joke fr' it. An American ambassadee springs an anecdote that wud rock th' walls iv Ioway with laughter, an' th' nex' mornin' th' editor iv th' London Times reports that he's been down to th' British museum an' discovered that th' story was first attributed to Ethelred th' Unready.

"Th' ambassadee finds that beyond th' first guffaw whin he appears in Piccadilly at noon in his mornin' clothes he ain't able to stir a ripple iv laughter. Thim he stops jokin' an' thries to touch this hard people with simintin. 'I will appeal to their hearts,' he says. He goes out to Shakespeare's birthplace an' places a wreath on it fr'm th' Lithry an' Baseball club iv Oskyoosa. They are not moved. He visits Westminster abbey an' weeps over th' tomb iv George th' Third. They don't seem to care. He proposes to dig up th' remains iv George Wash'nton an' bury thim in th' abbey. They tell thim there ain't room. He informs thim that England is th' fount iv th' pure an' ondedified English that is used be us, an' all they say is: 'O, what bally rot!' It's a hard thing fr' an American ambassadee to have to stand up before an aujence that he is thryin' to please an' have thim orderin' cabs an' sendin' fr' their bats. He grajally slips down on th' program until th' waiters begin puttin' th' chairs on th' table whin he starts to talk. It must be disturbin' to a statesman to pick up th' pa-aper an' read an account iv th' annyooal bankit iv th' Hon'able an' Ancient Comp'ny iv Fried Fish Cooks, where he'd spint hours an' hours showin' thim that if it hadn't been fr' Chaucer we'd still be talkin' to each other in th' sign language—it must be thryin' to him to pick up th' mornin' pa-aper an' read: 'Th' festivities was over at wan o'clock, at which hour th' comp'ny jined in singin' 'Gawd Save th' King' an' th' toastmaster give th' signal fr' th' endin' iv a happy evenin' be callin' upon th' American ambassadee to respond to th' toast, 'What Indyanney owes to Beaumont an' Fletcher.'"

"So he's driven to greater an' greater lengths to get a hand, an' before he's through he's offerin' to cancel th' Declaration iv Indipendence an' pull down Bunker Hill monymint. I don't blame th' ambassadee to th' court iv Saint James fr' what he said about th' Monroe doctrine. He was driven to it be that stolid English aujence. He had told thim forty stories fr'm Hostetter an' they had not laughed. He had told thim that th' same blood coarsed through their veins an' ours, an' they only looked amoyed. He had described how had he felt ivry time he went by Westminster abbey, an' they refused to weep with him. At five o'clock in th' mornin', in a fit iv desp'ration, he took up th' Monroe doctrine an' jumped on it. 'It don't mean anything,' he said. 'It's a joke I never heard iv till I come over here. If ye want South America, take it. It ain't mine to give, but ye can have it anyhow. Take anything we've got. Only smile. For hiven's sake, smile.' He looked around him. He was alone. Alone in London, alone in throbbin' London's central corte. An' he went home, an' that mornin' he had a dillygram fr'm th' prisdint askin' him what he meant. An' he answered: 'Meant nawthin'. Was on'y thryin' to amuse thim.'"

"An' there ye ar-re. I know iv no worse fate thin to be appointed professionnol intertainer to a nation that makes a professyon iv refusin' to be intertained. If we're goin' to send ambassadees over to delight th' people iv Europe we ought to make thim get new acts. It's clear to me mind that th' novelty is worn ol' American oratory an' that Englishmen no longer can be got to go out to dinner to witness these fere feats iv endurance. We ought to thrain thim along new lines. Why shud they make speeches, tell me? It wud be much pleasanter to read th' pa-aper: 'At this pint th' American ambassadee done a jugglin' act with a saucer an' a loaf iv bread,' or 'Th' American ambassadee intertained th' comp'ny with a card thrick,' or 'Th' American ambassadee afforded much delight with a banjo solo,' or 'Th' American ambassadee convulsed th' aujence be appearin' in blackface an' singin' a quaint southern melody entitled, 'Down Where th' Waskaloosa Flows.' It wud be much more plazin' to th' aujence, an' whin his term iv office had expired th' ambassadee cud come home in safety without puttin' on a disguise."

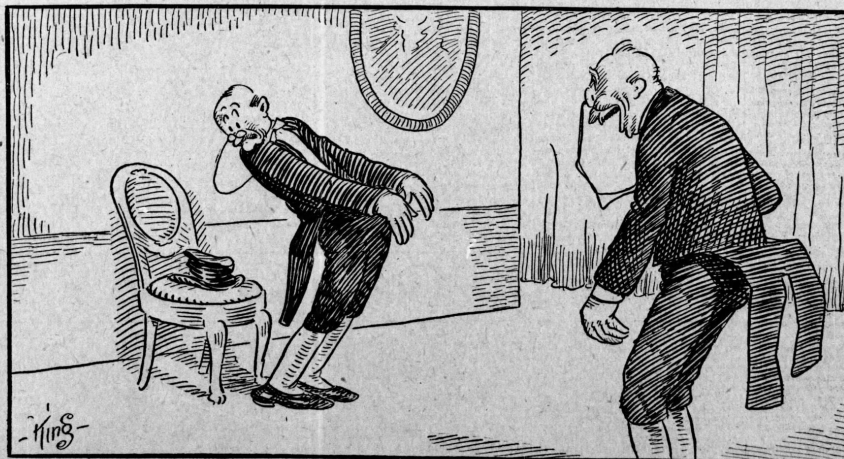

"Well, sir," said Mr. Hennessy, "something ought to be done to keep thim fr'm talkin'. Ivry time they open their mouth they put their foot into it."

"I wish they did," said Mr. Dooley. "I don't know anything that wud be more conducive, as Hogan says, to good feelin' between us an' th' gr-rent nation that was a mother to us until we cud stand it no longer thin that same use iv a number twelve brogan."

"What is the Monroe doctrine?" asked Mr. Hennessy.

"Large volumes has been wrote about it," said Mr. Dooley, "an' manny learned statesmen has thrived to explain it. But all I can make iv it is that it means: 'Ye keep out iv our back yard.'"

USUALISHES FROM

HOW many housekeepers appreciate the full value of corn as a vegetable for family use? In how many homes does it appear on the table except in the form of stewed corn, turned from the can and heated?

I do not mean today to speak of the many varieties of cornbread made with the white, southern, water-ground cornmeal or the yellow meal which is preferred in New England and other sections of the country. I want to call your attention to the merits of corn as a vegetable, not only in the fresh or canned form but as hominy and mush.

We all of us know how housekeepers struggle for variety on our tables and how it must often be done with strict attention to economy. We get tired of potatoes after a while; of potatoes and other winter vegetables and we can't always afford the good products on the market, and although good canned vegetables are happily easy to obtain, yet we need foods that are heat and force producers.

This work corn performs, for it contains fat and protein as well as starch and furnishes energy and heat. More than this it is good to the taste. All the advantages a food may possess in other respects do not avail to persuade our families to eat it if it cannot be made appetizing. Corn and its products can be cooked in numerous ways to please the palate, and a little study of such ways is worth while.

Let me give a couple of cautions first. To begin with, corn in almost every form is bland, and there are circumstances under which it must be avoided or eaten moderately. On the other hand, this quality increases its merits in certain cases. The other caution has to do with the preparation of corn from the ear or canned. The husks of the kernel are tough and hard, and practically indigestible. Hence the corn should not only be well macerated when eating it, but it should be prepared in a way to save both teeth and stomach as much trouble as possible. When corn is eaten directly from the ear nothing can be done in the matter of softening the water does itself. He should chew it thoroughly, but that is something in which no one can help him.

In stewing corn or making it into fritters or croquettes or corn pudding or anything else which lies in the power of the cook for any of these purposes should be well and chop the corn finely, and take the pot from the fire immediately. If it is to be taken from the pot it should be grate rather than stir.

If it is to be taken from the pot it should be grate rather than stir.

There is no reason why corn should not be eaten without discomfort by persons of normal stomachs, while corn as hominy or meal is usually easy of digestion even by semi-invalids.

CORN CHOWDER.

For this we require a large can of corn, two small onions, four medium sized potatoes, six crackers, three tablespoons of butter, a cup of milk, one egg, and seasonings to taste. Two tablespoons of butter must be put into a frying pan and the onions sliced and laid in this. When they are brown they are taken out with a skimmer, leaving the butter, and into this are put a few slices of the potatoes, which should have been chopped, a layer of the crackers, which should not only be well macerated when eating it, but it should be prepared in a way to save both teeth and stomach as much trouble as possible. CREAM OF CORN SOUP.

Chop the contents of a can of corn fine, or cut the kernels from six ears of corn and put it over the fire with three cups of water and simmer until soft. Add salt and pepper to taste and a teaspoon of granulated sugar and rub through a colander or vegetable press and add the corn. Cook together two tablespoons each of butter and flour; when they bubble pour them a quart of hot milk, add a beaten egg, mix with the corn, and serve at once.

CORN CROQUETTES.

Cook together in a tablespoonful of butter and two of flour, and then these are blended air into them a pint of milk. When the sauce is thick and smooth add to it the contents of a can of corn from which all the liquor has been drained; the kernels should have been chopped fine. Put in a teaspoonful of granulated sugar, and salt and pepper to taste, turn into a flat dish and set away to cool. When entirely cold and stiff four your hands and form the mixture into croquettes. Roll each first in cracker dust, then in a raw egg beaten up with two tablespoons of cold water, then again in the cracker, and set where they will chill and stiffen. They should stand for a couple of hours before they are dropped in deep fat and cooked to a golden brown.

CORN FRITTERS.

Beat two eggs light with a cup of milk to which you have added a pinch of soda and a tablespoon of melted butter; stir into this two cups of cooked or canned corn, chopped fine, add two tablespoons of flour and salt and pepper to taste, and fry on a sizzling griddle. Eat hot as you would griddle cakes.

CORN PUDDING.

Chop the corn fine, whether it be canned or fresh. If fresh you will need the kernels from six ears of medium size; if canned the contents of an ordinary tin, turned out several hours before it is to be used and a tablespoon of melted butter; stir into this two cups of cooked or canned corn, chopped fine, add two tablespoons of flour and salt and pepper to taste, and fry on a sizzling griddle. Eat hot as you would griddle cakes.

CORN FRITTERS.

Beat two eggs light with a cup of milk to which you have added a pinch of soda

chopped fine. Cream together a tablespoon of butter and one of sugar and put with them two eggs, beaten light, two cups of milk, the corn, and salt to taste. Turn in the dish in which it was cooked, turn in a big spoonful of butter, and serve. This is a delicious way of serving corn.

CORN OMELET.

This makes a delicious substitute for a meat dish at luncheon or supper and is a good way to use leftover cooked corn. This should be heated in a cooking bowl and seasoned to taste so as to be ready to go into the omelet as soon as the omelet is done. For one four eggs should be beaten light with a tablespoon of melted butter and four tablespoons of milk, salt and pepper to taste, turned into an omelet pan and cooked. When it is done the hot corn should be put on one-half of the omelet, the other half folded over upon it, and the omelet slipped to a hot dish and served.

BOILED HOMINY.

Put two cups of hominy over the fire in enough cold water to cover it and boil three or four inches of water above it; boil steadily for an hour and a half, stirring up frequently from the bottom. When done pour it into a hot dish, salt to taste, and lay it in a hot colander.

FRIED HOMINY.

Your leftover hominy should have been put in a hot colander and drained. Then, in a frying pan, dip each in flour, and fry in good dripping, taking each slice as it is done and laying it in a hot colander.

HOMINY PUDDING.

Make precisely as you do corn pudding, substituting a cup of hominy, boiled, cold, and beaten up until it is fine and dry, for the corn.

HOMINY CROQUETTES.

Add a tablespoon of butter to a cup of cold hominy, work it in well with a spoon, add a teaspoon of sugar, and a beaten egg. Make the paste into croquettes with floured hands, roll them in flour, and fry them in fat.

BOILED MUSH.

Make a paste of two cups of cornmeal, two tablespoons of flour, a heaping teaspoon of salt and cold water at discretion. Have a quart of boiling water over the fire and put in the paste, stir it with a spoon, and when it is done, turn it into a hot dish. This can be eaten as a cereal or as a vegetable. It is good either way.

FRIED MUSH.

Dip each mush ball in fry as you would hominy.

POLENTA.

Cut the cold mush into strips, fry in shallow fat, sprinkle with grated cheese, and brown. This is a delicious way of serving it. This is an Italian dish and well worth a place on American tables.

Every Muscle in Play

The Bending Exercise

Measure Your Deep Breathing

WHAT a mountainous task it seems to most of us when we contemplate the idea of keeping all our muscles in trim, especially if we are not leading a particularly active life. "Now, if I had a gymnasium," begins some protesting woman. Yes, I admit that if all of us were sufficiently wealthy, to have a gymnasium it would be very fine and much easier to keep our houses of flesh up to the mark in beauty, health and efficiency; but if we haven't a gymnasium, why long for the impossible? It was one of the ancient philosophers who said, "We possess that which we despise." So those who long for gymnasiums have naught to do to possess them but to dispense them heartily. As a substitute let me recommend two yards of rope! The rope must be very strong, for it is to bear your whole weight. Do not use clothesline, for it breaks rather easily. You will know that if you have swung and tumbled in hammocks supported by it. Then, too, when fastening the rope about a post or the like, care must be taken that it is knotted very securely, for a fall is not to be a dangerous thing and result, especially in some of the exercises, in broken bones.

Can you count the times that we have sat under dripping chaises, eating peas, vainly endeavoring to see three rings at once, and gazing with admiration at the grace of the trapeze performers? That very grace meant ceaseless exercise, which brings an almost perfect control of the muscles. To a woman with well-controlled muscles, household tasks are but half the trouble that they are to the woman who never induces in any systematic kind of exercise. For gaining this desired control, there is no better form of exercise than that of fastening the rope to the side of the wall, possibly the corner of a strongly locked door, and then pulling one's self along hand over hand from a slanting position to an upright one. First stand with feet firmly planted at an angle of forty-five degrees upon the floor, wearing heelless slippers or standing in one's stocking feet. Wear high-heeled shoes in any form of indoor exercise, and never outside when it can be avoided. When the feet are planted firmly, and the body is in a vertical position, grasp the rope firmly in the center. Then very slowly start the body backward, coming toward the end of the rope in hand-over-hand fashion. Then slowly raise the body to an upright position by a hand-over-hand motion toward the tied end of the rope. Repeat this exercise three times, if it is not too tiring. The leg muscles, the arm muscles, wrist muscles, fingers, back muscles, neck muscles and nearly all the muscles of the body are brought into action and thus strengthened.

The larial exercise, that one gives grace and lightness. Swing the end of the rope about in true cowboy style, and then, raising the arm above the head, do your best to lass a badpost or any other convenient, unprotesting object that is within reach. As the larial is thrown, raise yourself lightly on the toes and raise the arm well above the head before moving it in the direction of the object to be lassoed. A stooping exercise, with unbending knees, is always beneficial, and tends toward grace and development and control of the back muscles. Stretch the place of rope out above the shoulders and even with the back of the head. Bring it slowly over the head, and then gradually down toward the toe, still having the arms outstretched. The longer this exercise is practiced the nearer the floor you will be able to reach. This exercise is somewhat more strenuous than that well-known one of touching the floor with the fingers. I speak of bringing the rope over the head slowly, and bringing it gradually toward the floor, because so many folk are so stiff that they cannot touch the floor, thereby sometimes deriving from exercise harm instead of good, fatiguing and exhausting themselves. Exercise not too rapidly and not too slowly, and with a certain rhythm and constant time. If you have taken lessons upon the piano, you will remember how your teacher advised you to get into the rhythm of a piece of music before attempting to play it for other people.

chest. Knot it loosely, so that when a deep breath is taken the knot will slip, if necessary, and allow a deep, full breath to be taken without any sense of restriction. Then carefully mark the rope with a line of ink, showing just how much of the rope was actually required to go about the chest. THE CRICKET PLAYERS

Old Raffles may or may not have been an excellent criminal, but as a cricketer I dare swear he was unique. Himself a dangerous batsman, a brilliant field, and perhaps the very finest slow bowler of his decade, he took incredible little interest in the game at large.

"Cricket," said Raffles, "is everything else, is good enough sport until you discover a better. What's the satisfaction of taking a man's wicket when you want his spoons? I'd chuck up cricket tomorrow, Bunny, if it wasn't for the glorious prospect it affords a person of my profession."

"How so?" said I. "It brings you before the public, I should have thought, far more than in either safe or wise."

"My dear Bunny, that's exactly where you make a mistake. To follow crime with reasonable impunity, you simply must have a palatial, ostensible career—the more public the better. That's why I want you to cultivate Journalism, my boy, and sign all you can. And it's the one and only reason why I don't burn my hair for firewood."

Nevertheless, when he did play there was no keener performer on the field, nor was any more anxious to do well for his side. I became my pleasure in accompanying him to all his matches, to watch every ball he bowled, or played, or fielded, and to chat with him in the pavilion when he was doing none of these things. You might have seen us there, sitting by side, during the first innings part of the Gentlemen's first match against the Players on the second Monday in July. We were to be seen, but not heard, for Raffles had failed to score, and was commonly cress for a player who cared so little for the game.

I was therefore much surprised when a young fellow of the exquisite type came and squeezed himself in between us, and met with a perfectly civil reception, and the liberty. I did not know the boy by sight, nor did Raffles introduce us; but my conversation proclaimed at once a slight acquaintance and a license on the part of the lad, which combined to puzzle me. My attention was attracted by the height when Raffles was informed that the other's father was anxious to meet him, and he instantly consented to gratify that whim.

"He's in the Ladies' Enclosure. Will you come round now?"

"With pleasure," says Raffles. "Keep a place for me, Bunny."

And they were gone.

"Young Crowley," said some voice far off back. "Last year's Harrow eleven."

"I remember him. Worst man in the team."

The game was boring me. I only came to see old Raffles perform. Soon I was looking wistfully for his return, and at length I saw him beckoning me from the pavilion to the right.

"Want to introduce you to old Amersteth," he whispered, when I joined him. "They're a cricket week next month, and this boy Crowley is one of the best. We've both got to go down and play."

"Both?" I echoed. "But I'm no cricketer."

"Shut up," says Raffles. "Leave that to me. I've been lying for all my worth, and I should conclusively as we reached the bottom of the steps."

"I want to give the show away."

Lord Amersteth was a fine-looking man with a short mustache and a double chin. He received me with much dry courtesy, through which, however, it was not difficult to read a less than friendly tale. I was accepted as the inevitable appendage of the inevitable Raffles, with whom I felt myself included as I made my bow.

"I have been told enough," said Lord Amersteth, "to ask one of the Gentlemen of England to come down and play some rustic cricket for us next month. He is kind enough to say that he will have fixed nothing better, but for this time is making expedition of yours, Mr. —, Mr. —, and Lord Amersteth succeeded in remembering my name."

It was, of course, the first I had ever heard of that fishing expedition, but I made haste to say that it could easily, and should certainly, be arranged. Raffles, of course, approved with his eyes, and Lord Amersteth bowed and shrugged.

"You're very good, I'm sure," said Raffles. "But I understand you're a cricketer yourself."

"I am one at school," said Raffles, "with infamous readiness. And I was stammering, I was stammering."

"I'm afraid not," said I.

"In the eleven," said Lord Amersteth. "I'm afraid not," said I.

"I'm only just out of it," declared Raffles, to my horror.

"Well, well, we can't all play for the Gentlemen," said Lord Amersteth. "My son Crowley only just scraped into the eleven at Harrow, and he's going to play for us. You won't be the only duffer, for you are one, and I shall be very glad to see you there. I shall be very glad to see you there. I shall be very glad to see you there."

"I should be very proud," I was beginning, as the mere pretense to regulate my case, but the eyes of Raffles opened wide upon me, and I hesitated weakly to do more.

"That's settled," said Lord Amersteth, "with the slightest aspersion or remark. I'm sure I shall be very glad to see you there. I shall be very glad to see you there. I shall be very glad to see you there."

Raffles rose also, but I caught the sleeve of his blazer.

"What are you thinking of?" I whispered. "I was nowhere near the eleven. I'm not sort of cricketer. I shall have to get out of this."

"Not you," he whispered back. "You needn't play, but come you must. I'll take for me after half-past six I'll tell you why."

But I could guess the reason; and I am ashamed to say that it cost me much less than did the notion of making a public fool of myself on a cricket field. My gorge rose at this as it no longer rose at crime, and it was in no trivial manner that I stroked about the ground while Raffles disappeared in the pavilion.

Then the bell rang, and I climbed to the top of the pavilion to watch Raffles bowl. It was no mere exhibition of athletic prowess. It was an intellectual treat, and one with a special significance in my eyes. What I admired, and what I remember, was the combination of resource and cunning, of patience and precision, of headwork and handwork, which made every over an artistic whole.

Nevertheless, when he did play there was no keener performer on the field, nor was any more anxious to do well for his side. I became my pleasure in accompanying him to all his matches, to watch every ball he bowled, or played, or fielded, and to chat with him in the pavilion when he was doing none of these things. Lord Amersteth was a fine-looking man with a short mustache and a double chin. He received me with much dry courtesy, through which, however, it was not difficult to read a less than friendly tale. I was accepted as the inevitable appendage of the inevitable Raffles, with whom I felt myself included as I made my bow.

"I have been told enough," said Lord Amersteth, "to ask one of the Gentlemen of England to come down and play some rustic cricket for us next month. He is kind enough to say that he will have fixed nothing better, but for this time is making expedition of yours, Mr. —, Mr. —, and Lord Amersteth succeeded in remembering my name."

It was, of course, the first I had ever heard of that fishing expedition, but I made haste to say that it could easily, and should certainly, be arranged. Raffles, of course, approved with his eyes, and Lord Amersteth bowed and shrugged.

"You're very good, I'm sure," said Raffles. "But I understand you're a cricketer yourself."

"I am one at school," said Raffles, "with infamous readiness. And I was stammering, I was stammering."

"I'm afraid not," said I.

"In the eleven," said Lord Amersteth. "I'm afraid not," said I.

"I'm only just out of it," declared Raffles, to my horror.

"Well, well, we can't all play for the Gentlemen," said Lord Amersteth. "My son Crowley only just scraped into the eleven at Harrow, and he's going to play for us. You won't be the only duffer, for you are one, and I shall be very glad to see you there. I shall be very glad to see you there. I shall be very glad to see you there."

"I should be very proud," I was beginning, as the mere pretense to regulate my case, but the eyes of Raffles opened wide upon me, and I hesitated weakly to do more.

"That's settled," said Lord Amersteth, "with the slightest aspersion or remark. I'm sure I shall be very glad to see you there. I shall be very glad to see you there. I shall be very glad to see you there."

me; but a great deal that followed did not, and, obviously to reacquire my worthy attention, Miss Melhuish whispered to me. In a casual whisper, whether I could keep a secret.

"I said I might, whenever another question followed, in a lower and more thrilling accent."

"Of course."

"Well, then, there are burglars in the neighborhood."

"Have they committed any robberies?"

"Then how do you know?"

"They've been seen. In the district. Two well-known London thieves, in a long and lengthy look, while I sat aloof and charmed more than ever in the company of a very serious Scotlandman who had arrived at a dinner, and who would talk of nothing else."

left me, I should think, with some remorse for her indiscretion, but more satisfaction at the importance which it had undoubtedly given her in my eyes.

I spare you my feelings of the next two hours. I tried hard to get a word with Raffles, but again and again I failed. In the dining-room he and Crowley lit their cigarettes with the same match, and had their hands together all the time. In the drawing-room I had the mortification of hearing him talk interminable nonsense into the ear trumpet of Lady Melrose, whom he knew in town. Lastly, in the billiard-room, they had a game of pool, and I sat aloof and charmed more than ever in the company of a very serious Scotlandman who had arrived at a dinner, and who would talk of nothing else."

Gentlemen and Players at single wicket, by Jove!"

"His eyes were brighter than I had known them for many a day. He got up his shoes and began padding his room with his usual rapidity."

"My dear A. J., said I in his very own tone, 'You're far too fond of the uphill game; you will eventually fall a victim to the sporting spirit and nothing else. Take a lesson from our last escape, and my lower as you value our skins. Study the house as much as you like, but do not go and shove your head into MacKenzie's mouth!'"

My wealth of metaphor brought him to a standstill, with his cigarette between his fingers and a grin beneath his shining eyes.

"You're quite right, Bunny. I won't. I really won't. Yet you won't old Lady Melrose's necktie? I've been wanting it for years! But I'm not going to play the fool, honey. I'm not yet old Jove—to get to windward of the professors and Mackenzie too! It would be a great game, Bunny, wouldn't it?"

"Well, you wouldn't play it this week?"

"No, no, I won't."

And with that assurance I went off to the billiard-room, to find to my creditably light heart. I possessed the gift of dimming unpleasant considerations, and I had been so lately in a brilliant moment, entirely from my mind.

It was true that there were other factors in this pleasing disappointment. In the first place, mirabile dictu, there were one or two even gruffer than I on the Abbey cricket field. Indeed, quite early in the evening I was of most value to me. I gained considerably by my luck for a lucky catch, a ball, of which I had merely heard the hum, stuck fast in my hand, which Lord Amersteth himself grasped in public demonstration. This happy accident was not to be undone even by me, and as nothing seemed like success, and the great encouragement of the one great cricketer on the field was in itself an immense stimulus, I actually made a run or two in my very first innings. Miss Melhuish said pretty things to me that night, and the great hall in honor of Viscount Crowley's majority; she also told me that was the night on which the robbery had occurred, and that she and I were full of arch tremors, and that she had been in the garden, though the entire premises were illuminated by night lights. Meanwhile the quiet Scotchman took countless photographs by night, which he developed by night in a dark room admirably situated in the servants' part of the house, and at last I learned that only two of his fellow-guests knew of the existence of his photographic apparatus.

The week was to end with a triumph on the Saturday, which was the day of our intended abandoning early in order to return to London. The match, however, was never played. In the small hours of the Saturday morning a tragedy took place at Milchester Abbey.

Let me tell of the thing as I saw and heard it. My room opened upon a central gallery, and was not even on the same floor as that on which Raffles and I think all the other men were quartered. I had been put, in fact, into the dining-room of the hotel, and I was very near my neighbors were old Lady Melrose and her hostess, who was by the Friday evening the actual festivities were at an end, and for the first time that week, I must have been asleep since midnight, when all at once a heavy thud had come against my door, and now I heard hard breathing and the all stamp of my door.

"I've got you," muttered a voice. "It's not a bad thing, but it's a bad thing. I was the Scotch detective, and a few years turned me cold. There was no reason in the world why I should be so still, and the muffled feet beat the floor to quicker measure. In sudden panic I sprang out of bed, and found myself in a doorway. A light burned low on the landing, and by it I could see MacKenzie, yawning and staggering in a silent battle with some powerful adversary."

"Hold this man!" he cried, as I appeared. "Hold the rascal!"

"Who has seen them?" I then asked calmly.

"A detective. They are believed to have designs on the Abbey."

"But why aren't they run in?"

"Exactly what I asked papa on the way back this evening. He says there is no warrant out against the men at present, and all that can be done is to watch their movements."

"On? So they are being watched?"

"Yes, by a detective, who is down here, and I heard Lord Amersteth tell papa that they had been seen this afternoon at Warbeck Junction."

"The very place where Raffles and I had been caught in the rain! Our stampons from the Inn was now explained."

"This is really quite exciting. Miss Melhuish," said I. "May I hear more of your come to know so much about it?"

"It's papa's. MacKenzie is the confidential reporter. Lord Amersteth consulted him, and he consulted me. But for goodness' sake don't let it get about! I can't think what tempted me to tell you."

"You may trust me, Miss Melhuish. But aren't you frightened?"

"Miss Melhuish sighed."

"There's nothing for them there, but look around the lake; look at the diamonds; look at old Lady Melrose's necklace alone."

"I paused a moment."

"Scotch he is," said Raffles, "and photographer he may be. He's a very good man, MacKenzie of Scotland Yard, and he's been in the Inn this afternoon."

"The detective," said Raffles. "Do you mean to say you don't know a detective when you see one, Bunny?"

"If that wasn't the fellow, which is Raffles, who he is?"

"To think that you've been talking to him for the last hour in the billiard-room and couldn't spot what he was!"

"I paused a moment."

"Scotch he is," said Raffles, "and photographer he may be. He's a very good man, MacKenzie of Scotland Yard, and he's been in the Inn this afternoon."

He was followed by nearly all the cricketers, who now burst upon the scene in a body, only to desert it for the chase. One of them, and one of them, and I would gladly have been another, had not the footmen chosen this moment to dash in from him, and to make a dash in the direction from which they had come. Lord Amersteth had on to an instant, but the fellow fought desperately, and it took the two of us to drag him downstairs, amid a terrified chorus from half-open doors. Eventually we handed him over to two other footmen who appeared with their nightsticks tucked into their trousers, and my host was good enough to compliment me as he led the way outside.

"I thought I heard a shot," he added. "I thought I heard three."

And out we dashed into the darkness. So dark was the night that we were in the cricketers' midst before we saw the shimmer of their palamas; and then Lord Amersteth almost took MacKenzie as he lay prostrate in the grass, for his very villainy.

"Who's that?" he cried. "What on earth's happened?"

"It's Clapham," said a man who knelt over him. "He's got a bullet in his shoulder."

"Is he alive?"

"Barely."

"I don't know," called a breathless voice. "He's not good, you fellows. There's nothing more stretched on to a sofa in the library. And there, with ice on his forehead and a bandage in his throat, his eyes open and his lips moved."

Lord Amersteth bent down to catch the words.

"Yes, yes," said he; "we've got one of them safe and sound. The brute you collected up in the garden, and he's now in the library. And there, with ice on his forehead and a bandage in his throat, his eyes open and his lips moved."

Lord Amersteth bent down to catch the words.

Can This Georgia-Made Ship Fly 1 The World? Around The World?

By William Garrard

ON AN ISLAND near Savannah a giant aeroplane, the largest constructed, costing $500,000 and capable of carrying sixteen passengers, was completed in October by Captain Matthew A. Batson, U. S. A. This great winged machine was built for flights across the Atlantic ocean, its speed, generated by two 125 horse-power motors is expected to be 100 miles an hour. Captain Batson hopes to make the trip to Europe in thirty-six hours.

When the Panama exposition opens at San Francisco in 1915, a covey of aeroplanes will begin a "round the world" flight. Captain Batson has entered his machine and feels confident that this aeroplane, larger than any other, constructed to meet the rigors and requirements of ocean flight, will be successful over the smaller aeroplanes of the ordinary types used by his rivals.

Harry N. Atwood, the noted aviation expert, says in The Saturday to the island, and camped there, forming a little colony. Strangers were kept from landing, and the whole went forward in secret until near the completion of the aero-yacht last fall.

Then, shortly before the aero-yacht was launched, persons were invited to inspect the factory and the craft. Soon afterwards, the yacht, which can travel on the surface of the water as well as in the air, floated on the Herb river.

Models Fly Successfully. Models of the big craft, themselves large affairs, have flown perfectly, it is said, and a trial flight, to be witnessed by army officers and others, will soon be held on the waters of Wilmington sound, which is a broad, smooth stretch of water adjacent to Dutch island.

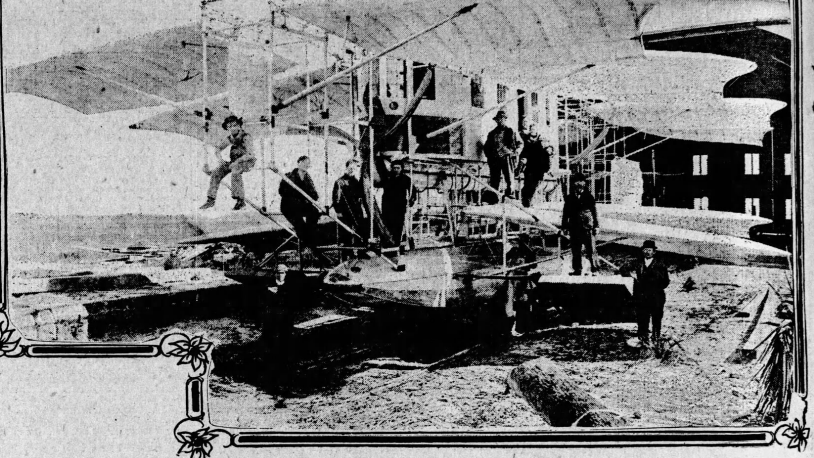

In building the aero-yacht, Captain Batson, who has been actively interested in aeronautics since 1896, has tried to expand upon and enlarge the principals of aircraft from the

the exposition grounds at San Francisco.

Contrary to the general idea, the easiest part of this tremendous journey as far as storms and adverse winds are concerned will be over the oceans and seas. For the air craft will ride above the gales, safe in the steady atmosphere which prevails high over sea water. No mountain peaks, no valleys beneath will have to be feared, with the consequent "air pockets" and hollows and eddies which have proven the death of so many aviators in flying over the land.

"The man who plans to fly over the broad ocean need have no fear at any time that mysterious, dangerous or otherwise annoying air currents will menace or interfere with his flying stability while aloft," writes Harry N. Atwood in the Saturday Evening Post.

Sailing Over Seas "Once he has progressed a mile from the coast, his machine will sail

Craft Built Near Savannah, Ga., by Capt. Batson, in Which He Hopes to Fly Round the Globe

speed of an automobile.

In building this wonderful air vessel, Captain Batson kept to none of the "antiquated"—if such a word can be used about aeroplanes—ideas of construction. He struck out along bold and original lines, and, if the machine lives up to its promise, it is bound to be such a success that all past aeronautical construction will be abandoned for new craft modeled after the air-yacht built at Savannah. Yet, says Captain Batson, in perfecting the principles of construction of the craft, in so far as they relate to actual flight, nothing has been attempted that has not been thoroughly demonstrated.

Can't Fall or Overturn. Another feature which ought to mark the Batson craft as the winner of the round the world flight to be held in 1915, is the fact that it is automatically safe, and cannot fall or overturn, even if both of the engines go dead at once, or if one of the four propellers breaks.

The mechanism controlling the wings is so arranged that should one of the engines be stopped the planes carrying big guns and many men and of passing over oceans with ease, would at once give this country world-mastery, such as would at last bring the dream of universal peace.

It is only ten years since man proved it possible to maintain himself in the air for even a part of an hour with a heavier-than-air machine. There were 307 one-hour flights officially recognized by the Federation Aeronautique during the first six months of 1911, since which time they have become so numerous as to cease being noticed even in aviation magazines. There have been hundreds of two-hour flights, a great many five-hour flights, while one man has flown 500 miles in six hours and fifty minutes, and another has flown continuously for more than thirteen hours.

The crossing of the English channel is an event of almost daily occurrence; overseas flights of more than 100 miles have been made; an aeroplane total flights throughout the world every day aggregate 33,000 miles.

Yet all this has been done with machines compared to which the coming air craft will be what the ocean greyhound is to the little steamboat in which Fulton paddled about the Hudson river. For with all the wonders of speed, distance-traveled, and carrying capacity developed in machines to date, the art of flying is still in its infancy, and it is thought by those best qualified to judge that none of the present day types of machines are even headed in the right direction toward perfect safety and lifting power sufficient to meet practical demands in warfare or commerce.

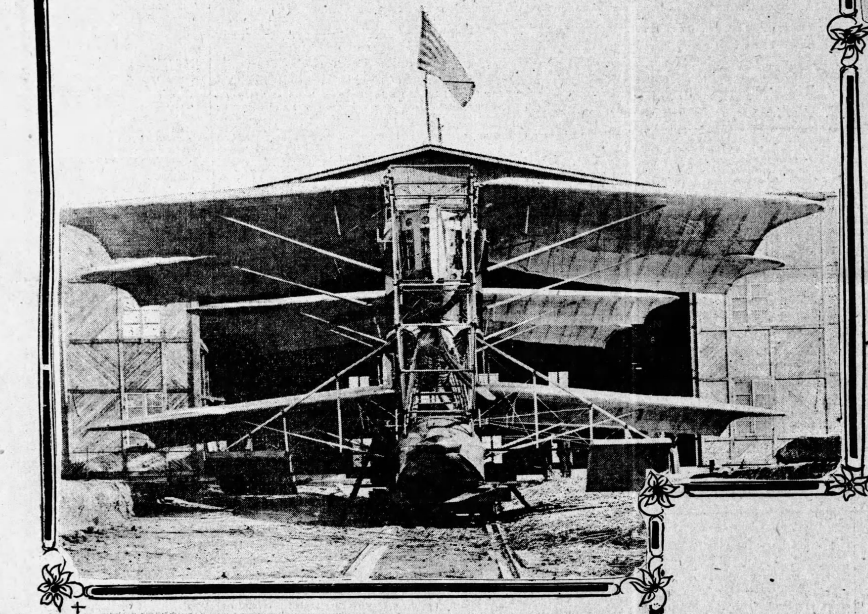

It is apparent, according to Captain Batson, that no rigid plane, so balanced in the air that when one side is tilted by any sudden current of air the other side must go down, can possess stability sufficient to insure absolute safety in flight. Nor can the present weight-carrying capacity be increased sufficiently to be of practical use in the larger sense for the size of the planes has already been enlarged to the extreme limits of the tensile strength of the materials of which they are composed. Captain Batson says that only under principles covered in his letters patent safety can these two points of absolute safety and great lifting power be perfected.

Dream of the Future. It has long been conceded that with the great force in intelligence concentrated on the subject throughout the world, someone, somewhere, would inevitably solve these great problems. The art has already been developed more rapidly than in the case of any other great industry, not excepting the automobile, and those who have given the subject most thought and whose opinions are therefore worthy of consideration, feel confident that the near future will see air navigation reach a state of safety equal to that of navigation of the sea, and that the crossing over seas and continents at greater speed than any yet known will excite no more wonder than the comparatively short flights and limited achievements of the present day aeroplanes.

The Batson, triple-motored aero-yacht is the result of many years of patient study and experimentation, during which the inventor constantly had in mind a machine combining safety equal to that of any other method of transportation, speed much greater than any hitherto known on land and sea; capacity for carrying a number of passengers and sufficient fuel for long distances; simplicity of control; no weight of means of starting from or alighting on land or water. The comparatively limited success of present types of monoplanes and biplanes did not deviate him from his course or change his plans, but their limitations only served to strengthen his decision to withhold his machine from public notice until the final successful development of every principle involved.

Evening Post, "that somebody, some day, is going to fly across the Atlantic ocean from continent to continent in an aeroplane is now a recognized certainty—at least in aeronautical circles. That somebody may succeed in accomplishing it within the next six months is a strong probability."

This noted writer on aeronautics was referring to the ordinary type of aeroplane. If the ordinary aircraft, equipped for nothing more than the flights which have been made in the past, can hope to cross the Atlantic and fly around the world, how much more certain are the chances of the great Batson aero-yacht, which is fitted up with sufficiently large fuel tanks and enough food and water compartments to make the entire trans-Atlantic flight without stopping?

How Machine Was Built.

The work of building this great craft started on Dutch island, on Warsaw river near Savannah, more than a year ago.

Captain Batson is the head of the Batson Aero Company, a corporation of New Jersey, with more than $500,000 capital. The first thing done on Dutch island, a deserted place, far from prying eyes, was to construct two huge buildings—a factory and an aerodrome. The factory, from which Captain Batson, the inventor of the new aeroplane, intends to build other aero-yachts if the first one proves a success, has a ground floor space of 7500 feet. The aerodrome, large enough to accommodate a complete machine, 30 feet long, is 45x100 feet, and two stories high.

On the wide of the deserted island on the Georgia coast these two buildings were reared, and machinery for the construction of the great craft was installed.

Expert mechanics and joiners came construction of the ordinary little aeroplane to that of his big yacht as shipbuilders enlarged upon the meager plans of the tiny "Clermont," Fulton's first steamboat. And, as the steamboat "Savannah," the first steam vessel to cross the Atlantic, sailed in 1819 from the Georgia port, so Captain Batson hopes to sail away across ocean and land, from Savannah in 1915. It is thought that the new craft will be named the "Savannah," and its inventor is confident that it will prove as epoch-making in the annals of air-navigation as was the little paddle-wheel ocean steamer of that name.

The test of the "round the world" flight from San Francisco will show clearly whether or not the Batson aeroplane is able to accomplish its purpose.

The route, recently announced, is a most difficult one, and takes the contestants across this continent, across the Atlantic, above Europe and Asia, and back across the Pacific, skirting the northwestern coast of Canada and the United States before finally ending in San Francisco.

Air Route for the Flyers.

The air craft will fly from San Francisco to New York, to Belle Isle, Canada, to Cape Farewell, to Greenland, over the Atlantic to Reykjavik, Iceland, over the Atlantic to the North Hebrides, thence to London via Edinburgh, across Europe to Moscow, then over the steppes and frozen Siberian plains to Irkutsk, to Harbin, to Vladivostok. Then across the water once more to Kobe, via Korea and the Japan sea, to Kamchatka, to East Cape over the Bering sea, to Cape Prince of Wales, thence to Sitka, Alaska, and from there to Vancouver, British Columbia, then to Seattle, Wash., and thence back to

through the air like an express train over a rock ballasted road.

"The atmosphere may be in a state of inactivity or it may be a howling gale—the sun may be shining from a clear sky or the lightning may be flashing—but if any sea the air liner will continue to sail along with a steady, smooth and undisturbed motion; in fact, for the entire distance from continent to continent, whether the sea is like a millpond, or is lashed to fury by a hurricane, the aviator will have nothing to do, so far as his aerial stability is concerned, but guide his ship in the direction he desires."

Mr. Atwood goes on to state that it requires a change in the velocity of the air motion of at least five miles in an hour in a second seriously to affect the normal balance of an aeroplane, and that such changes occur only where there are obstacles that offer resistance to the wind.

According to the plans of aviators of ordinary aeroplanes, there will be supply ships and stations to which the air craft will descend in time of need. Here is where the Batson Aero-yacht ought to far outdistance its smaller and more old-fashioned competitors—it will not have to descend for supplies or fuel, but, with the great gasoline tanks and the large store rooms on board, it can continue on its 100-mile-an-hour way while its rivals are stationary on the surface of the sea or land.

From what Mr. Atwood has pointed out, it is clear that the greatest danger to be feared by the "round the world" aviators are from the air currents and "pockets" and eddies caused by mountains or depressions on land.

New Word in Airships.

Here, however, is where the Batson aero-yacht, with its elaborate system of dual planes and many balancing and guiding rudders, will have an immense advantage.

The peculiar construction of the wings or planes is such that the currents are guided under the wings inwardly towards the body of the machine, carrying a cushion of air under and along the body of the machine, thus bringing the greatest stress on the part where the weight is carried.

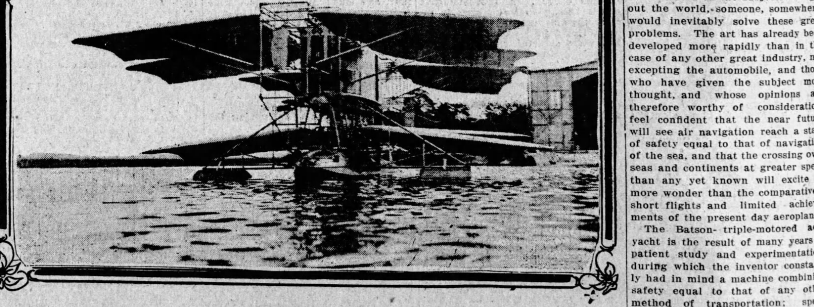

The wings are also so joined or coupled together that a single pilot can change their angles at once, thus raising or lowering the craft; he can also turn or curve the course of the air-yacht by changing the angle of any one pair of wings, without disturbing the others—all of which can be done as easily as changing the will at once and automatically be set at a safe gliding angle, and the machine will descend by a series of long glides. During this the pilot still has control of the steering wheel, and can conduct the descent so as to avoid obstacles in landing.

If Captain Batson wins the world-flight then the real dream for which he built the giant aeroplane will come true. Aeroplane liners, constructed like the Batson machine, will cleave through the salt air between America and Europe. England will be less than forty hours away, and trips to the Hawaiian Islands can be made for the week-end from San Francisco.

Then too, Captain Batson hopes the machine will be adopted by the United States government. A war fleet of speedy aeroplanes, capable of has flown from London to Paris in two hours and fifty minutes without landing, beating the fastest passenger service by three hours and forty-four minutes; the Alps have been surmounted; the altitude record stands at over three miles; cross-country journeys up to 4,500 miles have been made, and an average mileage up to 100 miles an hour has been maintained, while many flights have been accomplished in strong winds. Over 10,000 persons have made passenger flights of definite record; some 2,000 pilots have made a distance of considerably over 500,000 miles in the course of the certificate of the Aero club of France. It is conservatively estimated that present mileage averages 1,000,000 a month. In other words,
